MORE ABOUT THE BATTLE AT GETTYSBURGH.

A correspondent of the Richmond Sentinel writes from the camp of Alexander's battery of light artillery, near Hagerstown, Md., under date of July 10:

"There is no doubt about the fact that our repulse here has, at least for a time, changed the whole plan of this campaign. Almost every one feels that we attempted almost impossibilities. I thank we were too confident. I intimated this in my letter to you from Chambersburgh. Every man felt we could whip Hooker wherever we might meet him. We had forgotten the power of the spade, and the immense advantages which position may give. We had lost sight of the striking history of the siege of Vicksburgh, even while in progress; there 20,000 men successfully resisting and slaughtering a besieging army of 75,000 men, though surrounded and cut off from all succor.

"I am in Longstreet's corps, who commanded the centre on the right of Gettysburgh. Gen. Hood was on our right. Just to our front and right was a very rocky span, on which, the enemy had a battery supported, of course, by infantry. Gen. Hood sent word on Thursday afternoon to Gen. Lee, that he had met with an unexpected obstacle in the mountain, and that he could not advance. Both on Wednesday and Thursday we had driven the enemy without difficulty, but when we had fallen back to this span of mountain and the connecting range of hills, our advance was checked. Thursday was a glorious day in our front. The men were in splendid spirits. We would have done your heart good (for it filled mine) to see with (tears) to see Gen. Wofford's brigade charge the enemy, who was strongly posted in a large peach orchard about 500 yards from the grove in which our battery was placed. Between these two points was a gentle valley, covered with clover and corn, affording no protection. The enemy's artillery in this orchard had damaged us terribly. One battery in this battalion (Rhett's S. C., Lieut. Fickling commanding) had lost 30 men in less than an hour. But other batteries came rapidly in line, and the enemy's fire slackened a little. Wofford's men were lying just behind us, under cover of a hill. The order was given to advance. We ceased firing a moment, and the noble brigade filed between our guns amid ten thousand cheers from full and admiring hearts of the artillery. They passed the low stone fence, and when the noble line of two full regiments was formed, and began to descend the slope toward the orchard. The gallant General rode to the front with his right sleeve torn, his hat, (I believe) terribly during the afternoon. Between 1 and 3 o'clock I am satisfied we fired 25,000 shot and shell. This was just before Pickett assaulted the enemy's works. Had they been carried, we would have been at Baltimore ere this.

"Not a gun was fired on Saturday. It reminded us all of the day (Thursday) that followed the battle of Sharpsburgh. As it began to be intimated that we would fall back, every face grew sad; but when it was ascertained that our ammunition (heavy ordnance) was nearly exhausted, all acquiesced. I have no doubt the first man who wishes to return to Virginia. I have talked with timid men, but all agree that we can whip the Yankees any day on a fair field. This is all we want. We care little about numbers. We don't expect to 'remove mountains,' but we hope, by God's blessing, to do what the Army of Northern Virginia has so often done before.

"There is great discontent among the officers and men in regard to Order No. 72. The stores are all closed. Men who profess to be our friends in this State shut their doors in our faces and denounce our money. This is intolerable. These men are as truly our enemies as the blackest Republican in the land. To the Yankees their doors are wide spread. They say they can't buy goods with our money. Why not let them invest some of their money in our bonds? We don't wish to 'buy them out.' They embark in other speculations which they own are more hazardous. They say we will certainly establish our independence, and yet they will not turn a hand to help us. Many of our men need shoes, hats and clothes, and yet Quartermasters issue none, and none can be bought, though we offer to buy at a discount of our money of from 50 to 100 per cent. 'These things ought not so to be.' Officers ought to be allowed to buy what their men need; no one wants ornaments."

A REBEL CONGRESSMAN ON THE SITUATION.

SPEECH OF J. L. M. CURRY, OF ALABAMA.

Hon. J. L. M. Curry addressed a large number of ladies and gentlemen at his home in Talladega last week, in which he announced himself a candidate for reelection, and stated his position upon questions at issue. The Talladega Watchman gives the following synopsis of his speech:

"He justified the secession of Alabama, and the establishment of the Confederate Government. In this connection, the impossibility of cooperation with other Southern States prior to secession, without a violation of the Federal obligations, was clearly proven. The moderation and wisdom of the seceding States, in providing peaceably for country and preserving the elements of freedom, were brought out in striking light.

"The great question that the Confederate, or what is the same thing, that the Confederate Government had brought on the present war, was denied, and was established that Lincoln's Government was a new power, hostile for existing troubles. The charge of forcing the South into the war was repeated as it always has been and is a stigma on our gallant soldiers.

"Referring to peace, he said that he earnestly desired and prayed for an honorable peace—that no propositions for peace had ever been made by Lincoln or any Northern State; that the belief that peace could be had at the sacrifice of our liberty and independence would at once have been frowned down by the whole country, as an ignorant delusion; and concerning those words read from President Davis' message, declaring that President, Congress, and people of the Confederate States earnestly desired a peaceful solution of the questions at issue. The effort to reconstruct a Union party in the South was declared to be unjust to our noble States, grossly wrongful to the army, a direct encouragement to our enemies to persevere in their established designs. Whatever of peace sentiment exists, or has found expression at the North, is based exclusively on the idea of reconstruction, and that even a proposition too monstrous to be interpreted by any Southerner. While he would not sacrifice one iota of rights of property in making propositions for peace, he had more hope in conquering a peace than in humbly begging the Yankees to abandon their unholy war. If peace be desired by the North, withdrawal of their army from our soil would accomplish it.

"The financial condition of the country was then referred to, and the injurious effects of a redundant currency in enhancing prices and increasing our expenditures, without an adequate return, were fully presented. The necessity of the Funding Bill, to withdraw the excessive expansion of the currency, and convert the surplus into bonds, payable at a remote period, was illustrated, and satisfactory extracts from the reports of Mr. Memminger and Mr. Burnes were produced to show the wisdom and necessity of the measure.

"As an auxiliary to the funding process, and to reduce our currency and restrain our credit, the Tax bill was defended. Many of its features were objectionable; amendments would improve some of its parts; but the general principle of a tax as uniform as Congress was good, and the theory impracticable. The advantage of an income tax was, that it adjusted itself to the fluctuations of the war. The tax in kind, or the tithe, was explained at length, and while several and effectual, by a series of practical arguments, it was made apparent that the Government would be withdrawn, to a great extent from the market, as a purchaser of the stores proper for the subsistence and forage of the army; that the tax in produce could be paid by the farmer with more ease than in any other mode; that the Government, as the great purchaser, being practically withdrawn from the market, individuals would purchase at lower rates; that the currency would be relieved of an amount necessary to purchase the articles in kind, and that the debt would be wealthy distributed.

"The resources of our country were discussed, and our ability exhibited to pay a debt contracted in a war of independence.

Mr. Curry expressed the hope that the war would not be of long continuance; showed that God had graciously commingled it with good; that henceforth we would be a separate people, free from Yankee ideas, Yankee books, and their corrupt society, current politics and false religion; and that while our sires fought for independence, and their blood had established and the strongest securities to ruinous and hopeful enemies.

"The whole speech was plain, practical and argumentative, and every one who heard it felt that, whatever else might be said of our representative, he was unusually bold and frank in the avowal of his opinions."

"OUR NAVY."

Under this caption the Richmond Whig says:

"The recent decision by the Lord Chief Baron of England in the case of the Alexandra, is worthy of the special attention of our Secretary of the Navy. While that decision has to be affirmed by a higher Court, to which appeal has been taken, before it becomes operative, the probabilities of its being sustained are sufficiently strong to warrant preliminary steps on the part of our naval authorities toward the construction of a formidable navy.

"The argument of the Lord Chief Baron, who rendered the decision in this case, derived its main force from a decision rendered by Judge Story, in an analogous case which arose some years ago in the United States. His decision was that it was perfectly competent for shipbuilders to construct vessels of any kind, and dispose of them as they would of any description of merchandise, only that they must leave the port where sold, carrying no warlike equipments. The English decision was in strict conformity with this, and doubtless that decision will be fully affirmed by the Appellate Court, to which the case has been carried.

"The policy of the United States down to the period of the Crimean war has been in keeping with the decision. The Yankees, in some instances, during the pendency of that war, even overstepped the limits which that decision prescribed, by equipping vessels sold to the Russian Government with arms and munitions of war—and that, as there is strong reason to believe, with the connivance of the United States Government. This manifestation of sympathy with Russia led to the establishment of intimate and friendly relations between the two Powers, which are, doubtless, materially strengthened by the community of Governmental policy which gives both an unenviable distinction among the civilized nations of the earth. England will not permit the precedent which the United States has furnished in the decision of Judge Story, and the practice pursued under it, to go for nothing. The monopoly which she would secure to her commercial marine, as the result of a decision which would open to us the privilege of constructing naval vessels in her ports, will not appeal to them that pride of superior legal acumen which caused British jurists to recur to American decisions in the past. The citation of Judge Story's ruling is eminently opportune, and care will be taken by England to turn it to good account.

The advantages to us which an affirmation of the decision in this Alexandra case will afford cannot be overestimated. If they are promptly availed of by our naval authorities, we shall be in a position not only to give the death-blow to the commerce of our enemy, but to strike at some of his northern cities. In the present state of the harbor defences of New-York, Boston, Portland, and smaller northern cities, such a vessel as the Warrior would have little difficulty in entering any of the ports, and in one brief hour could lay them in ashes. The destruction of Boston alone would be worth a hundred victories in the field. It would bring such terror to the "blue-noses," as to cause them to wish eagerly for peace, despite their overweening love of gain, which has been so freely administered to them since the opening of this war. Vessels of the Warrior class would promptly raise the blockade of our ports, and would even in this respect confer advantages which would soon repay the cost of their construction.

The Secretary of the Navy has been thought by many, excellent including, deficient in energy, enterprise and resources. His friends assert that, for the secrecy necessary to be observed in the operations of his Department he could be fully vindicated from these imputations. They declare, indeed, that the investigations of the Congressional Committee appointed to examine into the management and transactions of his Department have shown that these charges are without foundation. And that the culpability for many remissnesses charged to Mr. Mallory really rests with another member of the Cabinet, without whose cooperation he could do nothing. We do not know how this may be. But we are of opinion that the opportunity now afforded will test Mr. Mallory's fitness for his post in such a way as to leave the public indifferent to what any Committee may say or think. They will judge for themselves whether he has made such use of it as the public interests demand, and by that judgment, from which there will be no appeal, he must stand or fall.

A RELIGIOUS VIEW OF OUR "GOOD SPIRITS."

From the Richmond Christian Advocate.

This stereotyped expression—"in good spirits" may be heard at any street corner, and even in any news journal of the day. It is the language both parties in this gigantic war employ, from time to time, to describe their respective feelings. It is sometimes sincerely uttered, sometimes hypocritically. It is the expression of a cheerful courage, it is also the deceitful language in which some disguise their anxieties.

If they mean what they say, very little good fortune seems needful to excite the happiest emotions of our enemies. When they escape an utter defeat, they are "in good spirits;" when they come egotistic in all the pride and pomp of their numbers, and flee back routed to their places, they have only changed their base, and are "in good spirits," when they lay siege to a place like Vicksburgh, spend millions of dollars, throw away thousands of lives of free, sacrifice in front of our guns ten thousand lives—without an idea of how much good such sacrifices, otherwise devoted, might do—they are "in good spirits;" and when the beleaguered city surrenders, (though its capture cost them a hundred fold its value,) in delirious intoxication, such as only those persons feel to whom a victory is very rare, they ring all the bells in Yankeedom, and fire off all the cannon they can spare for such locomotion, for they have reached the climax of "good spirits."

Now we do not envy the "good spirits" of a people who rejoice in wickedness, and glory in their own shame. The fiendish glee of those who take pleasure in the slaughter of men defending their own homes, is an enjoyment we hope our people may never possess. Their joy is the fruit of principles that deserve hell, and nothing that will make them fill a page in history full of infamy.

If they were good men they would take no pleasure in witnessing the suffering even of those who were enlisted in error. They would rather weep over the necessity of war against their enemies. It is highly creditable to the South that the people of the Confederate States indulge, under no circumstances, in such demonstrations of exultant joy. When we defeat our foes, we humbly thank Heaven, and sincerely pray God to give them a better mind. Our "good spirits" should flow from pure principles, holy convictions and an abiding faith in the true and living God. We ought to be so firmly fixed in faith that temporary reverses cannot dismay, and the largest successes will only confirm our trust in the Lord of Hosts.

If we are merely circumstantial, we shall be the pitiful victims of life's vicissitudes. A people devoid of noble sentiments, governed by motives of policy, and without lofty principles, having no great, good end in view, will always be governed by existing circumstances, and will be sad or gay, joyous or depressed, accordingly.

"Good spirits" will always be realized by people conscious of rectitude and hopeful in God. In such a cause as ours we ought to be ashamed not to be in "good spirits" all the while, as far as hope of final success is concerned. We commend to our people the thirty-seventh Psalm. Read it carefully.

THE CONSCRIPTION.

SEVT. DAVIS' PROCLAMATION EXPLAINED.

BUREAU OF CONSCRIPTION.
RICHMOND, VA., July 21, 1863.

To answer numerous inquiries, and to correct errors not uncommon, the following notice is published to all concerned:

1. Under the recent call of the President, extending the conscript age, all substitutes have ceased to be valid if the substitute be less than 45 years old, and is not otherwise exempt by law.

2. Members who (unless as an officer duly accepted by the War Department) of local organizations for home defence or special service, contract to claim to exemption from Confederate service, neither does service in the militia, unless in case of officers actually in commission who have duly qualified.

3. Hereafter any one furnishing a substitute will become liable in his own person, whenever the services of the substitute are lost to the Government from any cause other than the casualties of war.

4. Applications for exemption on any ground based upon facts to be ascertained by the local enrolling officer, who, if he has not power to act, or is in doubt, will refer them to higher authority, with report of the facts. All such addressed direct to higher authority will necessarily and invariably be referred back for local examination and report; and the applicants will thus have unjustly lost time and prolonged suspense.

5. Appeals against adverse decisions by local officers will be forwarded by them for hearing, when any possible ground of appeal is set forth.

6. Commanders of conscripts will give this notice extensive circulation in the local Press of their respective States.

G. W. LAY, Lieut.-Col., A. A. G.,
Acting Chief of Bureau.

THE COTTON BONDS.

A SECOND CALL FOR BIDS OF MR. MEMMINGER.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, C. S. A.,
RICHMOND, July 21, 1863.

Sealed bids will be received by the Secretary of the Treasury, at any time before 12 o'clock M., of 5th August, 1863, for the purchase of Are millions of dollars of six per cent. twenty-year bonds, with coupons payable on the 1st of January, under the act of Congress, approved April 30, 1863. The bonds to be issued will each be in the sum of $1,000, and bids will be accepted for one or more bonds. Each bid must be indorsed, "Bid for Cotton Bonds," and must inclose a certificate of deposit in the name of the Treasurer of one per cent. of the purchase money, made with the Treasurer, Assistant Treasurer, or some Depositary of the Treasury. The deposit will be returned if the bid is not accepted, and if accepted, will be applied in part payment of the purchase money, if the terms are complied with; or will be forfeited if not complied with. Bids accepted must be paid within ten days after notice of acceptance, in current Treasury notes, one-half at least of which shall be of issues consequent to April 1, 1863.

A copy of the bond may be seen at my office of the Treasury Department.

C. G. MEMMINGER, Secretary of Treasury.

THE REBELS IN KENTUCKY.

The Force Reported to be under Command of Col. Pegram.

PROBABLE CAPTURE OF THE INVADERS.

CINCINNATI, Wednesday, July 29.

The following information was received at headquarters last night:

Col. Pegram, with between 1,500 and 2,000 men, crossed the Cumberland River a day or two since, and moved north toward Richmond. He was in the vicinity of that place at last accounts.

The prevailing opinion here in military circles is that when Pegram started he was not aware of the capture of Morgan, and contemplated assisting him to escape.

The disposal of our forces in Kentucky is such as will be impossible for him to either advance much further or to escape.

CINCINNATI, Wednesday, July 29.

Morgan is disposed of in time for Burnside to attend to fresh foes, now advancing towards Lexington. There are all sorts of rumors afloat.

The substantial facts are that Col. Scott's old command, with Pegram's and Ashby's regiments, in all about fifteen hundred men, crossed Cumberland River a day or two ago, at Big Creek Gap, and moved toward Lexington; our pickets and patrols retiring before them.

Detachments of the Tenth Kentucky and Second Ohio cavalry, and One Hundred and Twelfth Illinois mounted infantry, in all four hundred men, under Col. Sanders, were attacked at Richmond, Ky., yesterday morning, overpowered and badly cut up.

They fell back on the Kentucky River, where they crossed, pursued by the enemy.

The people of South Kentucky River were panic-stricken and fled North, bringing improbable rumors of the advance of 18,000 rebel cavalry and Crab Orchard; with Buckner and 45,000 more in reserve at Knoxville. All improbable.

Martial law was declared in Lexington, and all the citizens were called to arms. Gen. Boyle commands the post. Gen. Burnside has gone to Lexington.

The Kinkaid bridge is strongly guarded, and the rebels will not probably cross there.

Gen. Pegram's and Gen. Scott's commands were in the rear of the rebels, so they will cooperate with Gen. Boyle in Central Kentucky.

FROM GEN. MEADE'S ARMY.

The Line of the Rappahannock Again Occupied.

Active Movements to be Suspended for the Present.

MOVEMENTS OF LEE'S FORCES.

Hill's and Longstreet's Corps Encamped Between Culpepper and Gordonsville.

The Bulk of Ewell's Command Still in the Valley.

SKIRMISHING AT THE OUTPOSTS.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 29.

Mr. E. A. Paul sends the following to this bureau:

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Va., Wednesday, July 29.

This army to-day occupies practically the same line that it did two months ago. The recent active movements will be necessarily followed by a period of comparative inaction, during which it will be recruited and recuperated.

The most stupendous blunder of the war is still the common topic among all grades, for all firmly believe that had Lee been attacked on the Sunday previous to his commencing to recross the Potomac, the rebellion to-day would have been at an end.

For the next month the cavalry will do most of the fighting.

As I have before stated, Longstreet's and Hill's commands, after passing through Thornton's—not Chester—Gap, have encamped between Culpepper and Gordonsville. Ewell's command covered their rear and sank by guarding the Blue Ridge passes. The bulk of this corps is now moving down the Valley, and detachments threaten our lines. Yesterday morning at 9 o'clock our pickets were driven in near Amissville, and the indications to-day are, that our outposts are liable to be forced in at any moment by superior detachments of the rebels.

If there is but little sickness, and the men are more liberally supplied with rations than ever before. This, taken with the recent Union successes, creates a general good feeling in the army.

A large number of officers have recently been detached to bring on drafted men.

Meade's Operations—In an Enemy's Country—The Late Gen. Farnsworth.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEAR UPPERVILLE, Monday, July 20, 1863.

Notwithstanding my prediction to the contrary, Meade has actually made an attack upon one of our trains, but fortunately it was so well guarded that he gained but little by the operation. As the army advances into Virginia again, all begin to feel most sensibly that they are in an enemy's country. This is made apparent in different ways. First, the ruling powers are more particular as to the rights of citizens than when in Maryland or Pennsylvania. Here every man's property, wherever any portion of the army bivouacks for the night, is scrupulously guarded. This was not done so generally in Maryland or Pennsylvania. The soldiers feel this change of affairs very keenly, the more particularly because the enemy, while in the States named, indulged in the largest license. Private property was scarcely any where respected, and in some instances the officers compelled respectable families to do their washing, never offering to pay for the same, and in one instance at least, found fault with the manner in which their linen was done up, and made the family rewash and iron the articles again. Turned-up noses with the fair sex are as plenty as ever, notwithstanding the late disasters to the Confederate arms. Ladies (!) not unfrequently refuse to answer when respectfully addressed, but with the majority of the men there is evidently a favorable change. Those who, a few months ago, were blatant Secessionists, now are more moderate, and talk hopefully of peace, and profess to believe that they begin to see the beginning of the end. Their hopes, however, are based upon a fallacy; they refer to the riot in New-York as a popular movement against the "war party" at the North which will culminate by electing a successor to Mr. Lincoln in favor of recognizing the independence of the Confederate States—and a few of the more hopeful believe that Mr. Lincoln will even be compelled to withdraw the Union troops from Southern soil. As the army moved forward armed enemies slip in every where, and it is a disgrace that the army cannot be permitted to wipe out, as it moves on, all the bushwhackers in the country. A party of armed men came within one mile of our camp to-day and fired upon some of our men who were out foraging. Capt. Theilkuhl, Topographical Engineers, through a misunderstanding, rode to near Piedmont Station to-day with several others expecting to find headquarters there to-night, and narrowly escaped being captured. In recrossing the Potomac Gen. Gregg's division moved from Harper's Ferry to Charlestown and then moved to Shepardstown. To this place he was attacked by Stuart with eight pieces of artillery. The fight was kept up until 8½ o'clock in the evening, when Gen. Gregg fell back to Harper's Ferry. Col. De Forest, at Harper's Ferry, heard the firing and was about moving on with his brigade to render assistance, but met the retreating column. Our loss was only about twenty killed and wounded.

THE LATE GEN. FARNSWORTH.

As every reliable fact in connection with the death of the much lamented Gen. Farnsworth is of interest, especially to those who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, I will here add some particulars furnished me by Surgeon Woon, Medical Director Gen. Farnsworth, it will be remembered, was killed on the left at Gettysburgh, Friday, July 3, while leading the First Vermont, First Virginia and Eighteenth Pennsylvania cavalry in a charge. Dr. Woon, on Sunday, went out twice in search for his and other bodies. Both times the party was fired upon by the enemy's sharpshooters. Later in the day Dr. Woon went himself upon the field, and found the body of Gen. Farnsworth a few rods beyond the second stone wall, a little to the right, in a rocky ravine. The body had been stripped of everything save an undershirt and socks. Near by was the General's favorite horse. Immediately after leaping the first stone fence, the General's horse was shot, and he himself was wounded in one leg. An orderly gave him another horse, and as he remounted, and urged on the charge, he was seen to lead forward and press one hand upon his stomach. It is probable that he then received the ball through his stomach. At the second fence the enemy had placed a lot of rails there together, so that it was impossible to leap it, and Gen. Farnsworth directed the First Virginia to left oblique and the First Vermont to right oblique. The First Virginia obeyed the order. The First Vermont did not hear it, or at all events the movement was not executed by them, and consequently they got under a more disastrous fire than if the order had been heard and executed. Gen. Farnsworth's body was pierced by five balls—one in each leg, one through the shoulders, one through the stomach, and the last one just above the heart. When found his face was as calm and pleasant as when in life. The last shot must have killed him instantly. His remains were interred at Gettysburgh. The fatal bullet is now in the possession of Dr. Woon.

Col. DeForest, of the Fifth New-York cavalry, a few days ago arrested a man at Snicker's Gap, upon whose person was found papers going to show that an extensive contraband trade has been carried on between Baltimore and Richmond, notwithstanding the stringency of the blockade. The papers will be duly forwarded.

Snicker's Gap Occupied—Soldiers Buried at Bounsboro, Md.

SNICKER'S GAP, Sunday, July 19, 1863.

The Fifth Michigan cavalry took possession of this Gap yesterday—meeting with a slight opposition only from a few of White's cavalry. The Gap is now held by Lieut.-Col. Brewer, of the Eighteenth Pennsylvania. The enemy have a picket of fifteen men at the ford, who have seen fit to fire at every body wearing a blue uniform, but thus far without wounding any one.

To-day it is reported that Mosby's cavalry is in our rear looking after the army trains, but they are now sufficiently well protected to prevent loss. Our cavalry is guarding the mountain passes. Lee's army is rapidly moving down the Shenandoah Valley; citizens who have been his columns within the last two days, say it is more like a mob than an army.

The following named soldiers have recently been buried in the grounds of the Lutheran and Dutch Reformed Churches at Bounsboro, Md.:

Sergt. R. C. Vincop, Co. K, 9th Illinois cavalry.

THE REAR GUARD OF LEE'S ARMY.

The First New-York Cavalry in Pursuit—Rejoicing of the People at the Disappearance of the Invaders—A Word of Explanation.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

SHARPSBURGH, Md., Friday, July 24, 1863.

Since the departure from this part of the country of the Army of the Potomac, this place has been occupied by part of Meagher's old division, Col. A. T. McReynolds, First New-York cavalry, commanding. Yesterday morning, scouts brought in word that the enemy had left Shepherdstown and vicinity, and the rebel pickets were no longer to be seen on the opposite bank of the river. A party was accordingly ordered by the Colonel to cross the river, and if possible to proceed to Martinsburgh. The detachment, consisting of about one hundred men of the First New-York cavalry, under Capts. Jones, Emens and Bailey, with about the same number of the Twelfth Pennsylvania cavalry, the whole under Maj. T. Quinn, First New-York cavalry, left at 11 o'clock, crossed the river, and going through Shepherdstown, reached Martinsburgh about 2 o'clock P. M. Our troops were received with great joy by the inhabitants, scorch as well as Union, and they all said, "we knew the First New-York cavalry would be the first men back here." Our men were freely supplied with such provisions as were theirs, and not often in Maryland were our troops more heartily welcomed. There was one exception, however, for one lovely rebel, Miss B——y, was so overcome by the sight of the blue jackets and "that awful Capt. Bailey," that she fainted clear away. Our men captured in Martinsburgh one Lieutenant and twelve men, who were found in the town and brought safely across the river. The citizens tell of great suffering in the rebel army, and say that there are no rations issued, the men having to provide for themselves. Our pickets were thrown out while the men were resting at Martinsburgh, and came in sight of the rebel pickets, who proved to be the rear of Ewell's corps. There were about one hundred sick and wounded rebels, among them several officers—all of them in a condition that precluded their being taken away. The troops returned to camp last night. Col. McReynolds has taken every precaution, while in command here to guard against surprise, and is on the alert, as he has ever been, to take advantage of whatever comes to his knowledge. It was a portion of his command, (the First New-York cavalry,) at North Mountain, that took possession of Martinsburgh last December, and they have now been the first to dash in there again.

While writing, please let me make a word or two explanatory. Some of the papers have charged Col. McReynolds with negligence and with being surprised at Berryville last month. Such a charge is totally unfounded. The white flags had slept on their arms for two or three nights previous to the attack, and on the night of Friday, June 19, Capt. Hampson came across the rebels at White Post, and Lieut. Pennington on the road from Millwood to Front Royal, being six or twelve miles from Berryville. So far from being surprised, we had both events for some days of the presence of the enemy in the valley. Justice to our Colonel, who gratuitously and has been for some time, the senior Colonel in the army, demands these few words.

IMPORTANT FROM WASHINGTON

Gen. Gillmore's Operations Against Charleston.

HIS ARMY TO BE REINFORCED.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, July 29.

OPERATIONS AGAINST CHARLESTON.

Gen. Gillmore has been promised all the reinforcements he needs. Charleston must fall, and this can speedily, if energy, celerity and 13-inch guns will accomplish that result.

The statement in a cotemporary, that Gen. Gillmore's losses in the recent engagement were one-third of his total force, is pronounced incorrect. His losses were not near so heavy as at first represented. In the last action he did not lose over 700 men, and his total losses since he began the campaign will not amount to over 1,100.

HORSES FOR THE GOVERNMENT.

Government officers are canvassing the neighboring counties of Maryland for the purpose of procuring more horses for immediate use in the army. They impress such as are adapted to the service, leaving to the loyal owners certificates of purchase, which will be duly honored by the Government. The prices allowed range from $135 to $145 per head—a large advance on former rates. A requisition was made to-day on the Quartermaster's Department for 1,000 head of horses, only 100 of which could be furnished. Several hundred dismounted cavalry men have arrived here within the past twenty-four hours, and are now waiting to be mounted.

Surgeon Mills, Medical Inspector of Gen. Grant's army, has been ordered before the Retiring Board. He is a tried and faithful officer, and has become broken down with hard service in the field.

The Difficulty of Gen. Brown with Gens. Wool and Sandford.

The Defence of Brig.-Gen. Brown—The Reports of Gens. Wool and Sandford

ALL THE OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS IN THE CASE.

Defence of Brig.-Gen. Brown.

FORT HAMILTON, Tuesday, July 28, 1863.

Having performed a most painful and trying duty in as quiet and unobtrusive a manner as I could, confining myself during his whole time to the rooms of the Metropolitan Police, having none but official intercourse during the time with any citizen, not personally acquainted with one of the leaders of the respective parties, or with a single member of the Police of the City, never having communicated with them, or any of them, before, during, or since, in relation to the riot, why is it that I am assailed by Maj.-Gen. Wool and Maj.-Gen. SANFORD?

I propose to answer this question by a plain statement of facts, supported as I am by the unimpeachable testimony of others.

Gen. Wool, in his letter to Gov. SEYMOUR, dated July 20, says:

"I immediately complied with the request of the Mayor, and issued orders [ ] the troops under my command in the forts of the harbor, having none in the City—to assemble at my headquarters with the least possible delay, leaving only guards to take care of the forts."

Now I distinctly say that Gen. Wool ordered only one and a half company of my command, (which embraced all the troops in the harbor, except those of Fort Columbus,) and that all the rest were ordered up by me, and that, but for my taking the responsibility, there would have been in the City of the regular troops but two and a half companies. (Vide Doc. A. 2.)

He further says:

"In the afternoon of the 13th, Brevet Brigadier-Gen. BROWN, who was in command of the United States troops in the forts, (except Fort Columbus,) presented himself and volunteered his services, expressing a willingness to serve in any capacity in the emergency then pressing upon us."

Gen. Wool is again mistaken. I reported to him, as the military commander of the City at New-York—which I was by order of the Secretary of War—and claimed as such the right to command, which was reluctantly granted me, (vide Doc. B.,) and I was ordered to report to Gen. SANFORD, and was instructed to cooperate with him.

Gen. Wool published two orders, signed by himself—the one dated July 13, and addressed jointly to Gen. SANFORD and to me, another dated July 14, also signed by him and addressed to me. I never saw or heard of either of these orders until I saw them in the Herald, and I have asked the gentlemen associated with me in the police office, and they say they never heard of either of them. (Vide Doc. B.) In corroboration of this fact, it is possible that two special aids-de-camp orders should have been issued and the Adjutant-General have known nothing of them.

Gen. Wool says that Gen. BROWN

"Actually issued orders to troops stationed at the latter's [Gen. SANFORD'S] headquarters, without any reference whatever to Gen. SANFORD, which, however, were countermanded by the latter."

I desire to call especial notice to this, in connection with the declaration of Gen. SANFORD—

"That the peace of the City could have been instantly restored in the morning, but for the interference of Brig.-Gen. BROWN, who, in disobedience of the orders of Maj.-Gen. WOOL, withdrew the detachments belonging to the General Government, and thereby so materially diminished the force under the control of the Provost-Marshal as [much as] almost entirely to arrest the further operations against the rioters."

Now if what Gen. Wool says is true, that my orders were countermanded by Maj.-Gen. SANFORD, how could my interference have affected the issue, as there could have been and were no movement of troops? The truth is, that the movements were made afterward, on my application to Gen. Wool, and, I presume, (though I do not know,) by his orders.

Gen. SANFORD further states:

"Gen. WOOL'S report to the Secretary of War on this subject, when published will show his efforts to rectify this mischief, and the manner in which this order was evaded and disobeyed."

The truth is, and I declare it unequivocally, I disobeyed no order of Gen. Wool, and I never received any order of any kind from Gen. Sandford. The only orders I received from Gen. Wool, while I was in command, were to send a force to relieve Col. WISSER, who had been driven by the mob, leaving his guns and four men wounded in the hands of the rioters—to send the company of marines to report to the naval officer in command in the City, and to send the Fort Columbus Company back to that post. The first orders were promptly obeyed; the second could not be by me, because that Company had been sent (I presume by Gen. SANFORD) to the Gas Works, and were not beyond my control. I have no other recollection of any other order, of any description, from Gen. Wool to me during the four days of the riot.

Now, in relation to the statements of Gen. Wool, about my desiring to resign and again asking to be restored, it being purely personal, in which the public can take no interest, I shall only say that, differing from Gen. SANFORD as to the manner of conducting affairs, I, on the impulse of the moment, did request to be relieved, but on the representations of the Mayor and Mr. BELMONT, I saw I was wrong and I was not afraid to say so; that I did apply to Gen. Wool, but my distinct understanding was that I was to cooperate with Gen. SANFORD, and such I supposed and still suppose to have been the understanding of Gen. Wool. If he considered me acting under Gen. SANFORD, how is it that he addressed his first order jointly to Gen. SANFORD and to me, and his second to me? Or how is it that all the regiments, volunteer or militia, arriving in the City, were ordered to report to me and not to Gen. SANFORD?

The conclusion is irresistible that Gen. Wool actually considered me, (as I legally was,) and not Gen. SANFORD, to be the Military Commander of the City during the four days of the riot, his order to the contrary notwithstanding; that he was glad to use me so long as I could be useful, and is now striving to reap for himself the fruit of my labors.

Not having been permitted the privilege of making an official report, it may not be amiss for me to give, as briefly as I can, my version of the events of the four days.

On Monday, about 1 o'clock P. M., I was informed by Capt. SUISSOR, Assistant Quartermaster, that there was a serious riot in the upper Wards of the City, and that the mobs were burning houses and murdering and robbing citizens, and that Gen. Wool had sent a messenger down to Fort Hamilton to order some troops to the City. I immediately wrote an order for the company at Fort Wood, commanded by Acting-Assistant-Surgeon SMITH, to proceed without delay to the City, and I made inquisition for the commanding of the same. I then went to Fort Hamilton and learned that Gen. Wool had ordered to the City a company and a half, and that they were about starting; ordering Lieut. MCELWRATH, my Adjutant, to have all the troops ready to move at a moment's notice, I proceeded to New-York, ordered Capt. FRANKLIN, in command, to report at the Police office, and reported myself to Gen. Wool. I suggested to him that the other troops should be ordered up, to which he assented. I then went to the Quartermaster's office, (it now being about dark,) with orders for the troops at Forts Richmond, Hamilton and Sandy-Hook, to come without delay to the City, and sent two steamers for them. I then went to Gen. Wool and claimed, as the military commander of the City, the right to command the United States troops in it, to which he reluctantly assented, ordered me to report to Gen. SANFORD and to cooperate with him. I immediately proceeded to the Metropolitan Police office with Mr. ACTON, sent an order for the United States troops, (all of which had been sent to the Arsenal,) to come to that place, and requested Gen. SANFORD to meet me there in order to make arrangements for a joint cooperation of the military and Police. No troops came, but after some three hours Gen. SANFORD came and insisted that the Arsenal was the important point, and that the troops must all be kept there for its defence; differing from him, and stating that I did not understand myself to be under his command, but cooperating with him; he went to the headquarters of Gen. WOOL, and very soon after I received the order placing all the troops under Gen. SANFORD'S command—the result I have elsewhere stated.

When I resumed my position on Tuesday morning at the Police Headquarters, I made arrangements with Mr. ACTON for a cooperation of the military with the Police, and gave the orders necessary to carry it into effect, which arrangements were stringently and without variation carried out, although the pressure from without from high dignitaries for the withdrawal of troops from certain Wards, and of citizens for the protection of their private property were unceasing and very great; but guided by the superior knowledge, experience and excellent judgment of the indefatigable President of the Board, Mr. ACTON, this pressure was firmly resisted, and to it, the bravery of the troops and the fearless, daring and untiring labors of the Police, I attribute our ultimate success.

The troops of my command were constantly employed by day and night, and with the Police were engaged in some ten or fifteen conflicts, with largely superior numbers of the mob, and in every instance they were victorious. More intelligent and gallant officers or braver troops cannot be found. All did their duty nobly and all are entitled to the praises of their country, and I desire to name Capts. PUTNAM and FRANKLIN, of the Twelfth Infantry, as meriting especial praise.

To President ACTON, Mr. BERGAN and other Captains of Police, the City owes a deep debt of gratitude for their wise and efficient measures, which were so gallantly executed by the Police, and which saved the City.

On Thursday night Capt. PUTNAM thoroughly whipped the mob and suppressed the riot, and on Friday morning I was deprived of my whole command without any cause being assigned.

In conclusion, I invite special attention to the letter of the Commissioners of Police, herein appended, and marked "D."

Brevet Brig.-Gen. U. S. A.

ASSISTANT QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
NEW-YORK, July 17, 1863.

I certify that steamboat transportation was furnished by this Department, on the requisition of, at the request of Brig.-Gen. HARVEY BROWN, U. S. Army, on the night of the 15th inst., for troops from Sandy Hook, Fort Richmond and Fort Lafayette, and at about the same time from Fort Wood, all to this City, to be employed in suppressing the serious riot then existing here, and that the number of men brought from each of those places was, as I was informed, one company from each place, except from Fort Lafayette, from which there was a detachment of less than a company.

These bodies of troops were independent of any for which transportation had been required by the Chief of Staff of Maj.-Gen. WOOL.

DANIEL STENSON,
Assistant Quartermaster, U. S. A.

HEADQUARTERS,
NEW-YORK, July 20, 1863.

As far as I am myself concerned, I can testify that you reported yourself to Gen. Wool at his quarters at the St. Nicholas Hotel, about noon on Monday, the 13th inst., as Military Commandant of New-York City.

I was very busy at the time, and did not hear, as Gen. WOOL says, "that you offered your services in any capacity, and was directed to report to Gen. SANFORD."

The orders of Gen. WOOL, published in his report to Gov. SEYMOUR, viz.: "That patrols of Military and Police should be sent through the disaffected districts," and the one of July 14: "To-day there must be no child's play," &c., were not issued by me, and I cannot therefore say whether copies were sent to you or not. They were certainly not sent by me.

Major, and Assistant-Adjutant-General.

FORT HAMILTON, N. Y. H., July 28, 1863.

I hereby certify that on the 13th July, 1863, I was Acting Assistant Adjutant-General of the City and Harbor of New-York. On the afternoon of that day, I received an order from Maj.-Gen. WOOL to send, immediately, to New-York a portion of the troops from Fort Lafayette, and half of the company then garrisoning Fort Richmond, in all about eighty (80) men. Upon showing the order to Gen. BROWN, he expressed great surprise at the small number of men ordered to the City, and directed me to immediately have all the troops at Forts Hamilton, Lafayette and Richmond got in readiness to move at a moment's notice. He also directed me to endeavor to organize a section of artillery to proceed to the City.

Gen. BROWN desired to levy on York with the troops ordered by Gen. WOOL, and about midnight the steamers reported to me, with orders from Gen. BROWN to send up all the efficient troops from the forts in the harbor, consisting of Capt. PUTNAM'S company from Sandy Hook, the permanent guard from Fort Hamilton, and the balance of the commands at Forts Lafayette and Richmond, being in all upward of 200 men. I supplied the places of these, by Gen. BROWN'S order, with companies of the Eleventh New-York Volunteer Artillery.

With the exception of the first order mentioned above, all orders for sending troops from these posts to New-York emanated from Gen. BROWN.

CENTRAL DEPARTMENT OF THE METROPOLITAN POLICE,
No. 300 MULBERRY-STREET, July 25, 1863.

Brig.-Gen. Harvey Brown:

SIR: We have received your note of this date, calling attention to a paragraph in the published order of Maj.-Gen. SANFORD, reflecting on your official conduct during the late riot, and asking from us a statement in relation to the matter.

Justice to the Police force as well as to you, requires a compliance with your request.

The paragraph of Gen. SANFORD'S order referred to reads as follows:

"The rioters were everywhere beaten and dispersed on Monday, wherever they made head; order was restored, and the peace of the City would have been restored in a few hours, but for the interference of Brig.-Gen. HARVEY BROWN, who in disobedience of the orders of Maj.-Gen. WOOL, withdrew the detachments belonging to the General Government, and thereby so materially diminished the force under the Major-General, as to limit most seriously his operations against the rioters."

We are pleased to say that the peace of the City was far from being restored on Monday or Tuesday. Gen. SANFORD no doubt thought that it was, but he did not choose to be in close communication with this Department, where alone, through the Police telegraph and other certain means, reliable information of the movements of the mob, could be promptly had.

The truth is the mob did not lose heart nor abate its audacious crimes, until late into Thursday night, though they were generally beaten by the Police and military.

Gen. SANFORD'S opinion, "that peace would have been restored in a few hours," refers, in point of time, to Tuesday morning, whereas the outrages of the mob continued nearly three days and nights after that time.

On Wednesday afternoon and evening Col. WILLIAM LAW, under orders, as we suppose, of either Gen. WOOL or SANFORD, made a military expedition, with 150 men and two howitzers, into Nineteenth-street, between First and Second avenues, was repulsed and driven away, leaving, as reported, Col. JASPER and three other officers wounded behind him. You were compelled to send out a night expedition under Capt. PUTNAM, to bring in the wounded officers. Col. JASPER and one other officer being all there were wounded. The duty was gallantly performed, after a serious contest, in which the rioters were severely punished.

On Thursday afternoon Col. MORR, under orders as we suppose of Gens. SANFORD or WOOL, had a contest with the mob in the vicinity of Gramercy Park, Twenty-second-street and Second-avenue, was driven from the ground, had a Sergeant killed and left the body among the enemy. Col. MORR applied to this Department for aid. You ordered an expedition in response to that application, under Capt. PUTNAM, who recovered the body of the dead Sergeant, and following up the mob inflicted severe chastisement on the rioters.

This was full two days and nights after Gen. SANFORD imagines that the peace of the City would have been restored, during which time riot, robbery, arson and murder, raged over the City.

These instances (and many more could be added) serve to show that the mob was in no respect subdued on Tuesday morning.

It is proper to state that in all instances you acted as auxiliary to, and in aid of the civil Police force, always in consultation with and at the request of this Board, and that in no instances were the expeditions sent out by you checked or defeated.

Several military expeditions were defeated and driven by the mob, thus affording them dangerous encouragement; but they were in all cases ordered by officers who did not act in concert with the Board of Police, and were sent out always without our knowledge.

So far from your action having had the effect supposed by Gen. SANFORD, we are of opinion, already expressed in an address to the Police force, that through your prompt, vigorous and intelligent action, and the intrepid and steady valor of the small military force under you, acting with the Police force, the riotous proceedings were arrested on Thursday night, and that without such aid, mob violence would have been continued longer.

We know that the service rendered by you and your force was invaluable, and deserves grateful commendation; and we are of opinion that it will not diminish any credit, justly due, to either Gens. WOOL or SANFORD, if they shall leave you in possession of your well-earned laurels.

We are, very respectfully, yours,
(Signed,) THOMAS C. ACTON,
JOHN G. BERGAN,
Commissioners of Police.

Letter from Gen. Wool to Gov. Seymour.

NEW-YORK CITY, July 20, 1863.

To His Excellency Horatio Seymour, Governor of the State of New-York:

DEAR SIR: Agreeably to a conversation with you on Saturday last, and in order that you, as well as the citizens of New-York, may correctly understand the course I pursued to check the rioters who commenced their depredations in this City on the 13th inst., and for some time, by their lawless acts, in killing persons, pulling down and burning buildings, to such an extent as to cause many to apprehend a general conflagration, I present you with the following statement:

The cause ascribed for this riot has been the attempt on the part of the enlisted Provost-Marshals to make the draft on that day at the various offices in the City. The operations of enrolling and drafting under the Conscription act have been independent of the military commander of the Department, and almost entirely under the control of the Provost-Marshal General.

On Monday morning, 13th inst., hearing of some disturbance in the upper part of the City, I saw Col. BURNETT, Provost-Marshal of this City, and called his attention to the subject, when he informed me that the Police of the City had already attended to it, and he required no other assistance; that the trouble had already subsided, and that I need give myself no further uneasiness on the subject. I then proceeded to transact important business at the lower part of the City, after completing which, on returning to my headquarters, I was informed that the Mayor wished to see me on business of moment. I called upon him, when he informed me that a serious riot existed in some of the upper Wards of the City, and asked me for assistance to quell it, saying that nearly all the militia force of the City had been sent to Harrisburgh to defend Pennsylvania from the rebel invasion.

From the representations of the imminent danger, not only in regard to the threatened destruction of property and lives of citizens, but also of the property of the United States, which was very large, and required immediate protection; and believing that to protect the public property from destruction it was necessary to put down the rioters, I immediately complied with the request of the Mayor, and issued orders for the troops under my command in the forts of the harbor—having none in the city—to assemble at my headquarters with the least possible delay, leaving only small guards to take care of the forts. The most of the United States troops thus ordered arrived in the course of the evening of the same day and were immediately, as they came, dispersed in the best manner for the emergency.

The Mayor and myself being desirous to have an interview was made to Rear-Admiral PAULDING, commanding the Navy-Yard; to Gen. BOWMAN, superintendent of the West Point United States Military Academy, to the authorities of Newark; also to the Governors of New-York, New-Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island for troops. Those furnished by Admiral PAULDING, a company from West Point and one from Newark, were on the spot promptly, as well as those furnished by the Governor of New-York.

The Militia that could be assembled by Major-Gen. SANDFORD were posted by him in the upper part of the City, and at the State Arsenal and in its vicinity, ready to act there or at any other point of danger. Upon the call of the Governor, the Mayor and myself, the veteran volunteers in the City, (officers and privates,) who had been mustered out of the service, as well as many citizens, volunteered their services promptly, and, organizing themselves, needed only to be furnished with arms and ammunition; and as soon as furnished Chief-Justice DAVIS put [them] in position to act effectively; not only in defending property, but likewise in putting down the rioters.

The City Police force, from the beginning, under the able Chief Commissioner, Superintendent and other officers of its organization, displayed throughout the whole riot not only a willingness, but very great efficiency, in their noble exertions to quell the riot. For this and their harmonious cooperation with the troops engaged in the same cause, they deserve the warmest thanks of every friend of law and order, and my commendation for their whole conduct on this trying occasion.

In the afternoon of the 13th, Brevet Brig.-Gen. HARVEY BROWN, in the immediate command of the United States troops in the forts, (except Fort Columbus,) presented himself and volunteered his services, expressing a willingness to serve in any capacity in the emergency then pressing upon us. I accepted his offer, and directed him to report to Maj.-Gen. SANFORD, who was then in the immediate command of the troops, with Col. BURNETT, Provost, Marshal in command of the United States portion of the troops—all the troops then out being formed of militia and regulars. Immediately after receiving my instructions, Gen. BROWN took his position at the Police Headquarters, No. 300 Mulberry-st., so as to be in immediate communication with the police authorities, and I supposed and two of my aids-de-camp.

I soon after learned, however, that in the disposition and management of the troops there existed a want of harmony between Gens. SANFORD and BROWN, in consequence of which I issued the following order, sending a copy to each:

HEADQUARTERS, DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST,
NEW-YORK, July 13, 1863.

Major-Gen. Sandford, Brev. Brig.-Gen. Brown:

GENTLEMEN: It is indispensable to collect your troops as stationed, and have them at all times in suitable parties, under due direction of the Police in each, and to patrol in such parts of the City as may be in the greatest danger from the rioters. This ought to be done as soon as practicable.

JOHN E. WOOL, Major-Gen.

After this had been issued Gen. SANFORD reported to me that the orders were not obeyed by Gen. BROWN, consequently I issued the following:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST,
NEW-YORK, July 13, 1863.

All the troops called out for the protection of the City are placed under the command of Maj.-Gen. SANFORD, whose orders they will implicitly obey.

By command of Maj.-Gen. WOOL.

T. C. CHRISTENSEN, Assistant Adjutant-General.

About 9 o'clock in the evening of the same day (13th) after this order has been issued, Gen. BROWN presented himself to me, complaining of Gen. SANFORD, and strongly objected to serve under him, asking to be excused from the operation of the order. My reply was to the effect that, as Gen. SANFORD ranked him, and the troops were mixed of militia, regulars, &c., I would not place him (Gen. BROWN) in command of all, and that for efficient operations a hearty cooperation of the State and United States troops and the police must be had for putting down the mob, protecting public and private property and the lives of the citizens threatened. Gen. BROWN, however, persisted, notwithstanding, in urging his objections and asking to be excused. I excused him, and issued the following order:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST,
NEW-YORK, July 13, 1863.

Brig.-Gen. BROWN, U. S. Army:

SIR: You are relieved from duty with the troops in the forts, and will report in person to Maj.-Gen. SANFORD, at the Police Headquarters, No. 300 Mulberry-st.

JOHN E. WOOL, Major-Gen.

The following morning (July 14), about 9 o'clock, I myself and Staff had been up all night receiving and issuing orders, Gen. SANFORD not having reported to me, and called to be relieved of the position he had accepted, Gen. BROWN, who had been relieved, considered himself as the wronged in having refused to serve under Gen. SANFORD, and that if he could be restored he would be willing to serve as ordered. I immediately granted the request, and Gen. BROWN soon after reported his place at the Police Headquarters, Col. NUGENT being directed to serve under the orders of Gen. BROWN, but not to be relieved from duty; and I learned the following morning that Gen. BROWN had left the City.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST,
NEW-YORK, July 14, 1863.

Brevet Brig.-Gen. Brown, United States Army:

SIR: The Mayor of the City has this day informed me that the police force of the City is sufficient to quell the present disturbances, and that he does not require the services of the troops under your command, and therefore requests that they may be withdrawn. You will therefore withdraw the troops under your command and report to me at Fort Wood, Bedloe's Island, New-York Harbor.

JOHN E. WOOL, Major-General.

Soon after this I received a note from Gen. SANFORD, saying that he had been in some of the upper Wards of the City, and was informed that the rioters were assembling in force, with the intention of burning the Colored Orphan Asylum, and requesting me to send a force to protect it. I immediately ordered Col. MORR, with his regiment, (the Fifth New-York Volunteers,) to proceed to the Asylum, and to report to Gen. SANFORD, who, I presumed, would be in the neighborhood. Col. MORR, on reporting to Gen. SANFORD, was ordered to report to me, and I ordered him to the Arsenal, to protect the arms and ammunition there deposited, and to be in readiness to act as circumstances required. Col. MORR, with his regiment, remained at the Arsenal during the whole riot, and rendered most efficient and prompt service, aided by the officers above named, who volunteered for the occasion.

The division has always been so organized as to be ready upon any emergency to effectually suppress all riots or insurrections, and the citizens of New-York have no fear but they can safely repose under its protection. The absence of thirteen regiments for one month's service, and of six regiments for the war, alone gave temporary success to the rioters.

The return of the twelve regiments from the field has lessened the City-eight thousand. One thousand one hundred men are now constantly on duty, prepared for instant service, and the whole division is ready to support these detachments on short notice.

During the whole of the riot, Com'y.-Gen. FAIRCHILD, with his brother, Col. FAIRCHILD, with their assistants, Mr. LEVERMORE and his subordinates, were constantly on duty at the Arsenal, delivering and receiving arms and ammunition; and the Major-General feels it a pleasure to bear testimony to their zeal and alacrity in the discharge of their responsible duties, as well as his personal obligations to them for their attention to himself and Staff.

By order of Maj.-Gen. CHAS. W. SANDFORD.
ALEXANDER HAMILTON, A. D. C.
J. R. WILSON, Division Inspector.

THE METROPOLITAN POLICE.

THEIR SERVICES DURING THE RIOT WEEK

THEIR HONORABLE RECORD.

HONORABLE MENTION.

Of course it is understood that, in the duties performed and in the dangers incurred by the different Inspectors, the Forces under their command share equally with them in whatever of honor is attached. This the Inspectors themselves claim; they know that to the bravery of their officers and men, to their eager and constant devotion to duty, are their successes and honors attributable. Each one of them admits this enthusiastically, and none more so than

INSPECTOR JAMES LEONARD.

Inspector LEONARD was on duty at Headquarters on Monday when Superintendent KENNEDY was brought in. After Inspector CARPENTER left with his command, acting under orders from Commissioner ACTON, he was incessantly occupied in massing at Headquarters what of the force had not been assembled, and in organizing them. At 9 o'clock P. M. rumors of a mob coming down Broadway were received. Taking command of a force, Inspector LEONARD marched to Broadway, met them at Bond-street—near the scene of Inspector CARPENTER'S afternoon victory—charged upon them, and after a brief but severe "little fight," broke, punished and dispersed them. Returning to Headquarters, he resumed duties there until midnight, when he was ordered, with a force of 250 men, to repair to the City Hall and relieve Inspector CARPENTER. While here his work was constant. Acting on information received he sent forces to Leonard and York streets, to protect the negroes there and punish the prowling gangs threatening them. This duty was thoroughly performed and was the means of saving lives, limbs and property also. He detached a force to protect a provision store in Greenwich-street, near Cortlandt, which he learned had been broken open and was being sacked. The mob was attacked, beaten and dispersed, and much property saved. More of his force was sent to BROOME & BROS.' clothing store to aid in its defence. Portions were detailed to protect the hotels in Fulton and Cortlandt streets, threatened by mobs, the proprietors of which had applied for aid. Toward morning he received word that a mob was marching to Fulton Ferry to meet the boats and prevent the landing of marines expected from the Navy-yard, and that they also designed burning Fulton Market, from the occupants of which a gang, attempting to kill a negro on the previous day, received severe punishment. Instantly Inspector LEONARD sent off a force to defeat their purposes. They met the mob, a formidable one, charged upon it with determined energy, and drove it in all directions.

It was now daylight, and Inspector LEONARD, who had reached the Hall with 250 men, had sent off, in obedience to telegrams from Headquarters, so many detachments to divers sections, that by 9 o'clock A. M. of Tuesday, he found himself without a man, and was left alone in his glory. 'Twas quite evident that at Headquarters his resources were thought equal to his energy and ability, for at that hour another order came for another detachment. Being the only detachment left, he personally reported himself as such at headquarters. Representing to Commissioner ACTON the necessity for continuing a strong force in the neighborhood of Printing-house square, he was ordered to the command of 200 men and with them hurried back to the City Hall. Upon the square and in the Park were thousands of riotously disposed persons, and the evidences of violence were gathering space; every unfortunate negro who appeared was chased and beaten, inflammatory speeches were being made and threats openly uttered. All these had increased at noon to such an extent, that, taking one hundred men, Mr. LEONARD swept the Park and square, clearing them of the dangerous material, considerable opposition was received, but with the small force of brave spirits the work was done quickly and thoroughly. Several times during the day had he to disperse the gatherings in these sections, and by his discretion and firmness undoubtedly saved a serious demonstration. At 6 o'clock in the evening, a company of regulars just arrived, were being followed up strongly by a yelling, yelling mob, who were building and endeavoring to intimidate them. A plan to disarm them and prevent their aiding the authorities was evidently perfecting. Inspector LEONARD, accompanied by Sergt. FOLEY, of the Eleventh Precinct, had met the mob as it passed the west entrance to the Park, and mingled with it until reaching Broadway and Chambers-street; here danger of an attack by overwhelming numbers was imminent; to save the soldiers was the first object, and to do that it was necessary to distract the attention of the mob from them. The plan adopted was one of boldness and hazard; a provost guard platoon was pointed out by the officer in command to Inspector LEONARD, who, with Sergt. FOLEY and the one patrolman, the fellow offering violent resistance, was dragged into the Park and toward the City Hall; meantime the ruse had had its intended effect, the entire gang of demons, turning from the soldiers, rushed to the rescue of their leader; on they came, three hundred against three, but those three determined men. "Kill them! kill them! We'll give you what we gave KENNEDY," were their shouts, as surging onward they sought to overthrow and secure. Facing the infuriates with his prisoners, in vice-like grasp, the Arm front, the spirited club, and the plainly speaking determination of Inspector LEONARD to die or deal heavily necessary as he was by his two associates, awed the mob from too close, too dangerous proximity. Once, however, a charge was made which threatened to overwhelm and crush them; well directed, fearless and telling blows stopped and staggered back the foremost; the prisoner, held in front and used as a guard against the missiles and blows aimed at the officers, was bleeding from the punishment received from friends as well as foes. Thus from the Chambers-street entrance to the one from Broadway, open facing the crowd and keeping it to their front, Inspector LEONARD and his aids succeeded in working their way. Here, and when it was indeed needed, help was at hand for the mob, now fully realizing the dilemma, portions of strength, were gathering for one grand and overwhelming effort. Fortunately word had reached the City Hall, and seventy-five of the force came rushing to the rescue. The moment they joined him, the brewary prisoner, whom there was no intention to retain, and who had so well been used for the purposes of the ruse and the defence, was cast aside, worthless, bleeding, and in with the reinforcements the Inspector went for exemplary punishment to the mob. Did they not administer it? A hand-to-hand fight ensued, heads were broken, men prostrated, and laid in heaps, and in a time less than is recorded, those who a few moments before were eager for and intent upon the lives of the three daring officers, were scattered like sheep before the gallant charge of the Police, or lay as slaughtered. Inspector LEONARD was bodily in the fray, his stalwart form being conspicuous, his rapid, earnestly meant, and muscular blows telling with telling effect.

This was the last of the exciting duties in which Inspector LEONARD was engaged. He remained on duty at the Hall, however, until Friday, when with command there he had rendered invaluable services to that section and the lower portion of the City. Constantly on the qui vive, sending out scouts and receiving prompt intimation of all designs there and thereabouts, he promptly met and defeated them. His had immense interests to guard; himself a host, his officers and men true as steel, they saved the Districts committed to their care from the contamination of evil-concerted acts of violence and pillage. Of active, intelligence and proved courage, Inspector LEONARD'S name shines brightly on the record of honor.

LAUNCHES.

The Quinnard Iron Battery Onondaga—Melancholy Incident and Accident.

For nearly a year past it has been generally known that some kind of a peculiar war-vessel was in process of construction at the Continental Iron Works, Greenpoint, L. I. Exactly what this novel specimen of naval architecture might be, the curious in such matters had no opportunity of discovering, as all the work has been done and the vessel made ready for launching, under an immense shed, which effectually concealed operations from inquisitive but unlearned people. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, under these circumstances, that an unusually large number of spectators were drawn together, yesterday morning, by the announcement that the mysterious vessel was to be set afloat. Tide neither waits for ships nor men, consequently the managers of the launch were compelled to accommodate themselves to the full flood-time of this iron-ribbed despot, and fix the somewhat early hour of 8 for the event. Neither this fact nor the unsettled state of the weather proved sufficient, as we have before intimated, to keep back the spectators. Long before the time fixed upon, every available point of observation had its occupant. The piers were packed, vessels in the vicinity were crowded, and the river was lively with tugboats and smaller craft.

On the deck of the Onondaga also there was a very large assemblage of more privileged folk—not a small minority of whom, like those on shore, were of the gentler sex. All were waited in subdued excitement the moment of the start, especially the ladies, some of whom gave evidence of being flustered in expectation of the novel sensation in store for most of them. Among the distinguished persons present we observed Rear-Admiral Gregory, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Fox, Capt. Melancthon Smith, who fought the old Mississippi so bravely below New-Orleans against the rebel ram Manassas, and is now in command of the Onondaga; Naval Constructors Delano and Hook, Chief Engineers Stimers and Sewell, Assistant Engineer S. Wilkins Cragg, U. S. N., who has recently superintended the construction of the battery in behalf of the Government; Lieut.-Commanding Gregory, Capt. Jos. Comstock, of the Collins steamer Baltic, Capt. Gray, of the Methellan, and Hon. Mr. Sedgwick, Chairman of the House Committee on Naval Affairs.

While the guests were engaged in inspecting the peculiarities of the vessel, and in pacing the perfectly unobstructed and solid deck, the sturdy blows of the workmen below were delivered faster and faster upon the supports that held the ship to the launching ways. Presently there was the slightest perceptible tremor of the massive hull, and instantly from the crowd on shore arose the shout of "There she goes! there she goes!" Swiftly and majestically she glided along the ways, until her stern reached the water, when, braving for a moment, it dashed up a wave three feet in height, that came curling beautifully along the deck, until the bows floated and the vessel got on an even keel again. For a second, as this mass of water came surging along, the guests on the after part of the vessel experienced fear of a ducking, and retreated helter-skelter forward. The momentary alarm gave them a singular sensation, for as they ran counter to the rapid motion of the ship their feet seemed to be dancing in air. Darting into the river about 1,000 yards, the noble craft was welcomed to her future element by the shrill shrieks of steam-whistles, the waving of handkerchiefs, the taunting of flags, and the vociferous cheering of the people. In less than half an hour the vessel was secured to the dock, ready for the finishing-work to be commenced upon her. There are one million of rivets in her hull, and on inspection it was found that she leaked little more than a new boiler.

The baptism of the Onondaga was to have been performed by Miss QUINNARD, the daughter of the designer. Last Saturday, full of life and joy, she visited the vessel, entering with spirit into the plans for somewhat extensive festivities, which were to commemorate the launch, and on Tuesday morning she was dead, having fallen a victim to a malignant disease. This distressing affliction prevented Mr. QUINNARD from participating in a scene where he had promised himself so much enjoyment, and, of course, the festive part of the programme was abandoned. The christening was performed by little Miss SARAH SEDGWICK, a native of Onondaga and daughter of the Senator.

Another melancholy incident of the launch was the injury of four workmen, by some misunderstanding in knocking away the supports. The forward blocks were removed too soon, and the after blocks, unable to sustain the immense weight, gave way, starting the ship, and crushing beneath the keel the poor men who could not get away fast enough. One of them, named JOHN CONNELL, residing in North Ninth-street, Williamsburgh, had his left wrist and hand dreadfully lacerated, a rib fractured, and suffered internal injuries, which are considered so severe that the physician in attendance has no hope of his recovery. Another, named WM. HOGAN, residing at Dutch Kill, Newtown Township, had the left side of his head crushed in, beside receiving severe internal injuries. A laborer named FAIRCHILD, and another man whose name could not be ascertained, received slight injuries on the back and head. CONNELL was taken to the hospital, but HOGAN was, at the request of some friends, conveyed home.

DESCRIPTION OF THE VESSEL.

The Onondaga is not an Ericsson battery, but was designed by Mr. GEORGE QUINNARD, of the Morgan Iron Works in this City. She is constructed wholly of iron. The hull is 257 feet 6 inches in length, and 45 feet in width. The frames are of angle iron, 3 inches by 3, riveted to a central plate at the bottom. There is no keel, properly speaking, but a ribbed or arched plating in the place of it, to which all the frames are joined. The lines of the ship are very easy forward and aft, presenting much less resistance than those other Iron-clads now afloat. There are no projecting armor shelves on the sides, but the vessel is protected from shot by single plates of 6 inches in thickness bolted directly to the hull. There is no wooden backing of any kind to support this armor, but forward there are a series of iron knees or angle pieces, secured to the deck and hull, which strengthen it materially, and enable the weight outboard to be carried without straining the ship or making her liable to leakage. The draught of water will be ten feet; the rate of speed is not known yet.

There are two propellers or screws, one on each side under the stern; each propeller being driven by two engines, built by the Morgan Iron Works, making four in all. The engines are of the horizontal, back-acting variety, and have cylinders 30 inches in diameter by 10 inches stroke. The propellers are 9 feet in diameter, and have an increasing pitch, the same being 11 feet on the forward side and 13 feet 6 inches aft. There are four main boilers (Martin's patent) and one large donkey boiler for working the auxiliary engines. Sewell's condenser is connected to the main engines, and a separate jet condenser is added, from which the turret engines exhaust when the main engines are not working; there is also a circulating pump attached to this last condenser, which is driven by the steam pump that feeds the boilers. Four blowing engines are provided to ventilate the ship in action and supply the furnaces with draft.

The turrets are the same as those upon all the Monitors—11 inches thick in the walls, 9 feet high and 21 feet in diameter inside. There are two 15-inch guns in each turret. The quarters for the officers generally are aft, although some of them, the engineers, for example, have accommodations forward. A great part of the storage is also aft, including the magazine and spirit room. Neither the bow or stern of the Onondaga overhang the hull, the stern projecting only enough to cover the screws and protect them from shot. The hull is divided by 13 transverse water-tight compartments, and the coal-bunkers surround the boilers in addition to the protection afforded by the iron plating. The extraordinary breadth of beam and full model should make the Onondaga a very stable ship.

AN OCEAN STEAMER.

Commodore VANDERBILT, having sold two of his steamers to the Government, is replacing them with every possible dispatch, and yesterday morning the first steamer, the Commodore, was launched from the yard of Mr. JEREMIAH SIMONSON, at Greenpoint. The vessel is of the following dimensions: length on deck, 272 feet; breadth of beam, 39 feet; depth of hold, 27 feet 6 inches. The launch came off at a very early hour, which limited the attendance to a comparatively small number of people. The Commodore was taken to the Allaire Works, where she is to receive a single beam engine of 80 inch cylinder and 13 feet stroke. This ship is built in a very substantial manner, and her model combines both strength with speed.

Claims Against the City for Damages Caused During the Riot.

THE LAW APPLICABLE TO THE CLAIMS.

The following additional claims for damages were filed with the Comptroller yesterday:

Mary Johnston, destruction of house No. 79 Roosevelt-street, $3,750; same No. 69 Roosevelt-street, $1,500; do. do. No. 73 Roosevelt-street, $1,500; do. do. No. 75 Roosevelt-street, $1,000; do. do. No. 26 New Chambers-street, $750; warehouse at No. 75 Roosevelt-street, $500; loss of business and rents during repairs, $3,100—total	$11,600 00
Frances Stark, robbery of dwelling and store No. 305 Third-avenue	89 75
John F. Lockham, robbery of hardware store No. 271 Third-avenue	39 05
Caroline Leidig, No. 1305 Greenwich-street, liquor, fur sufficient to induce them to lodge complaints against the rioters.

Officer Mahar, of the Twentieth Precinct, yesterday arrested Barney Mackay, alias Mackay, a young Irishman, against whom have been lodged three distinct complaints for rioting. Mr. John Fairbairn, of No. 276 West Forty-fifth street, the complainant in the case, swears that, on the 14th inst., he saw the prisoner engaged in a riot in Forty-fifth-street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues; that he had a musket, with bayonet attached, and, with a number of others, was watching about when a party of men, who were then dragging a negro with a lasso. The negro, Officer Mahar, Mr. Fairbairn, saw the accused similarly engaged in Forty-first-street with a crowd of rioters about him, committing various acts of violence. On the 15th inst., Mr. Fairbairn saw Mackay engaged in a conflict between the mob, Police and military. He was amongst the rioters, throwing stones at the military while passing along the avenue, likewise shouting "Go in, boys," and urging the mob to attack the Police and military. The military, on receiving the order, turned and fired on the mob. Amongst those injured was the prisoner, he having been shot in the leg. Soon afterward, Fairbairn met the complainant, and told him he had been shot in both legs by the military. Subsequently, regretting the confessions he had made, Mackay threatened to murder Mr. Fairbairn if he informed against him. The accused was arraigned before Justice Kalsh, and committed for trial in default of $500 bail on each of the three complaints.

Another Rioter in Custody.

Officer Enows, of the Thirteenth Ward, arrested Michael Monahan, a young Irishman, twenty years of age, by occupation a butter maker, charged with violently and outrageously assault and battery, on complaint of Mr. John F. Richards, of No. 30 Tompkins street, and Daniel Arment, Esq., residing at No. 59 Monroe-street. The complainants positively identify Monahan as taking an active part in the late riots, and he also assaulted Mr. Richards with a large stick. The offender was taken before Justice Bixbee, and fully committed for trial, without bail.

A Victim of the New-York Riots.

The body of the colored man which was found near the grain-elevator above South Ferry, Brooklyn, last week, was yesterday identified by his relatives residing in New-York, as Samuel Johnson. They stated that he was employed in a store in New-York, and resided in Williamsburgh; that on the evening of the fourth day of the riot, on his way home, he was met at the ferry by a body of rioters, attacked and beaten, and thrown overboard; that while in the water he raised up his hands and cried out "for God's sake, save my life!" when he sank and was seen no more. The head of deceased presented evidence of having been beaten with clubs, but as there was no direct testimony when the inquest was held, a verdict of found drowned, was rendered.

Meeting of Commissioners of Emigration.

The semi-monthly meeting of the Commissioners was held yesterday afternoon.

Dr. Gunn, Health Officer, applied for an allowance of rent for additional premises required by the officials. Referred.

The night watchmen at Castle Garden petition for increase of pay. Referred.

The Finance Committee were directed to purchase $50,000 of one year Government securities.

The number of emigrant arrivals to July 20 was reported at 26,000; being in excess of those of same period last year of 42,000.

Balance in bank Jan. 1, and receipts for commutation, dues, &c., to July 20, $1,06,337 94; Disbursements, $156,101 75.

The Eleventh Ward Murder Case.

Coroner Collin concluded the inquest yesterday in the case of Patrick McKenzie, who is alleged to have been beaten to death by a gang of rioters in the Eleventh Ward, as stated in yesterday's Times. A mass of testimony was taken, which tended to show that the deceased was badly beaten by Charles Flynn and others, and was then thrown overboard. The jury rendered the following verdict: "That the deceased came to his death by blows received at the hands of Charles Flynn and others, and that he was then thrown into the water before life was extinct, by some person or persons unknown."

A warrant has been issued by the Coroner for the arrest of Flynn, and placed in the hands of Officer Brandle, of the Eleventh Precinct.

Commitment of Alleged Rioters on Charge of Arson.

Patrick Sweeney, setting fire to dwellings in Sullivan-street. Held to bail in $1,000.

William Rigby, on same complaint, committed without bail.

Painter Springstein, setting fire to dwelling houses occupied by colored people. Held to bail in the sum of $5,000.

Patrick Murray, setting fire to enrolling office in the Eighth District. Held to bail in $1,000.

Thomas Cunasky, setting fire to dwelling house in Twelfth Ward. Held to bail in $3,000 for trial.

Patrick Henrady, Daniel McGowan and Thomas Cunasky, on another charge. Held in $5,000 each. All the above were committed by Justice Quackenbos.

Matthew Pongro was committed by the Mayor without bail, on a charge of arson, and Frederick Hammers, Patrick Kiernan and Bernard Fagan, on the same charge, in the sum of $2,000 each.

Military Affairs.

INSPECTION OF THE HARBOR DEFENCES.

Gen. Canby, accompanied by Capts. Fiske and Gray, of his Staff, proceeded to Fort Wood yesterday on a tour of inspection. On the day preceding, Gen. Canby visited Fort Schuyler and David's Island. It is his intention during the week to inspect all the fortifications and defences of the harbor.

COL. MERCHANT.

Col. Chas. Merchant, it is understood, has been assigned to the command of Fort Wood, Bedloe's Island.

THE CARBINES STOLEN BY THE RIOTERS.

It appears that the greater part of the 2,500 carbines stolen by the rioters from the Second-avenue Arsenal, have been recovered by the police and military. It is a pity that Commissary Gen. Farrell did not give his written order for a portion or all of these carbines, when urged to do so in the early part of June. At that time it was contemplated to arm all the policemen with guns in anticipation of a difficulty when the draft commenced. Gov. Seymour favored the project, and gave directions to have 1,500 carbines ordered, 500 to be taken from the number stored in the arsenal, corner of Twenty-second-street and Second-avenue. Major Taylor, who has charge of them, had them in readiness for delivery at any moment. It would be well for the State authorities to secure them while they can the entire number of 1,500 from those recovered, as they may possibly be of service in the future.

Testimonial to Col. Varian, of the Eighth Regiment, N. Y. N. G.

As will be seen by the annexed order, the members of the Eighth regiment are to present a testimonial to their Colonel, Joshua M. Varian, at the Seventh-avenue Arsenal, this evening. Col. Varian is an officer well known and highly esteemed in military circles, having discharged his duties faithfully and satisfactorily:

HEADQUARTERS EIGHTH REGIMENT, N. Y. S. N. G.,
STATE ARSENAL, July 20, 1863.

General Order No. —. The members of this regiment will assemble at the State Arsenal, corner of Seventh-avenue and Thirty-fifth-street, this (Thursday) evening, in full fatigue, with white belts and gloves, for the purpose of presenting Col. Joshua M. Varian with a testimonial.

Line will be formed at 8 o'clock precisely. The non-commissioned staff and band will report to the Adjutant 15 minutes previous. By order of

O. F. WENTWORTH, Lieut.-Col. Com'g,
T. A. Van Tassel, Adjutant.

Munificent Donation.

Yesterday morning the Mayor received from Alexander T. Stewart, Esq., his check for the munificent sum of $5,000. It was his contribution to the Relief Fund. The following note accompanied it:

BROADWAY AND CHAMBERS-STREET, July 20, 1863.

To His Honor Gen. Opdyke, Mayor, &c.

My Dear Sir: The bravery and devotion displayed by the Police, Firemen and soldiers during the late riot were of the highest order, entitling them to the grateful remembrance of every good citizen.

I have, therefore, great pleasure in inclosing a check for $5,000, to be applied by the Committee of which you are Treasurer, to the relief of such of them as were wounded and the families of those who were killed.

Very respectfully yours, ALEX. T. STEWART.

In this connection it is a suggestive fact that the Mary Edson, which Mr. Stewart chartered, ladened with provisions, and sent to Ireland for the relief of the famishing there—many of whom have sons, brothers, daughters here—is now on her return trip from her errand of charity ladened with one hundred and thirty operatives, part of those to sustain whom the provisions were sent, who come free of charge for passage of sustenance. We say this is a suggestive fact, especially when considered in connection with the purposes of the above munificent donation, and the sources of the outbreak. If we were well if it were thoughtfully, kindly, usefully laid to heart; it were well if such unobtrusive acts of aid given and protection afforded—though emanating as they do from a private individual—were deemed as they should be, but the reflections of what the Government and those who cling to it, have done, are doing and will continue to do.

Action of the Commissioners of Health.

A meeting of the Board of Commissioners of Health was held on Tuesday, at which the following resolution, offered by the Health Officer, was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Complaints is made by the Health Officer of the Port, that false representations are frequently made under oath, by the Captains of vessels, of cases of the health of their passengers and crews, and also of the ports from which they cleared, thereby grossly deceiving the health authorities, and subjecting the port to great risks of the introduction of pestilential diseases, particularly at this season of the year,

Resolved, That the District Attorney be instructed to prosecute, immediately on the complaint of the Health Officer, any person thus offending, and that in all cases of conviction, the full penalty of the law be enforced.

The full penalty is $2,000 fine and twelve months' imprisonment, either or both, and we are sure that complaints will be rigidly prosecuted.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

A Volunteer Wounded in the Riots.—A case especially worthy of the attention of the public is that of Myron Avery, a returned soldier, a member of the Eighth regiment, N. Y. S. N. G. He volunteered his services to aid in suppressing the riot, and joined the Zouaves, under Col. Winslow. On Wednesday, 15th inst., at the fight between the military and the rioters, corner of First-avenue and Nineteenth-street, he was shot while in the act of firing off a howitzer. The ball passed entirely through his knee, inflicting a terrible wound which will render him a cripple for life. After being wounded he was carried to a doctor's house in the vicinity, where he was tracked by the vengeful mob planning for and led by his blood. He had to escape hence by the rear, crawling, wounded as he was, over several fences, and finally utterly exhausted, fell in the yard of those who proved to be friends. They took him into the house and secreted him, the next morning kindly conveying him in a carriage to his home No. 5 Tenth-street. Mr. Avery is a young man of excellent habits, worthy, industrious, and while volunteering his services to the City has suffered an injury which will confine him a long time, and incapacitate him for the further pursuit of his business, which is that of a grain measurer.

Fatal Railroad Accident.—Coroner Naumann held an inquest in Arcana A, on the body of Charles Goldschmidt, a boy 14 years of age, born in Germany, who died from the effects of injuries received from being run over by a train of cars belonging to the Hudson River Railroad Company. A few nights since, deceased and two other boys jumped aboard the cars at Peekskill and managed to get a free ride to the City. While passing down Eleventh-avenue, the boys jumped from the cars at Thirty-fifth-street, and deceased falling with his arm across a rail, the train passed over and crushed it fearfully. Death ensued Tuesday night. The jury found that the occurrence was accidental.

Drowning Casualty.—Late on Tuesday afternoon two men, named Edward Little and Michael McCabey, in charge of a wagon-load of hides, attempted to drive through a pond of water at the foot of Little Twelfth-street, North River, but the tide being very high, they accidentally drove into the deep water of the basin, and before assistance could be rendered Little was drowned. McCabey was rescued by the prompt interposition of friends from the pier. The horse attached to the wagon was also drowned. The body of Little was recovered, and Coroner Ranney held an inquest. The family of deceased live in East Sixteenth-street, near First-avenue.

Unknown Man Found in the Water.—Coroner Ranney held an inquest at the Third Precinct Police Station on the body of an unknown man, dressed in soldiers' uniform, who was found in the dock foot of Barclay-street, North River. The uniform was dark blue and trimmed with light blue. Deceased was about five feet five inches in height, with sandy hair and whiskers. Apparently he was about 40 years of age. The Jury rendered a verdict of death from some causes to them unknown.

A Young Burglar.—Thomas Ryan, a boy, only 16 years of age, was arrested by Officer Irvine, of the Twentieth Precinct. Ryan is indicted, with two others, for committing a series of burglari s in Eighth-avenue. Among the places entered was the boot and shoe store of Messrs Somers, No. 521 Eighth-avenue. The prisoner was taken before District Attorney Hall, and committed for trial.

The Death of Hon. John J. Crittenden.—The flags on the City Hall are suspended at half-mast out of respect to the memory of the great Kentucky statesman, Hon. John J. Crittenden, the friend and successor of Henry Clay. Yesterday being the day of Mr. Crittenden's funeral, the flags remained at half-mast on all the public buildings throughout the day.

Little Boy Drowned.—The little son (5 years of age) of Mrs. Brownell, residing at No. 462 Ninth-avenue, was drowned in the dock foot of Forty-fourth-street, North River, in consequence of accidentally falling from a large raft on which he was at play. The strong current prevailing at the time carried the body out into the river, and all efforts to recover the remains have proved fruitless.

A Lady Robbed in a Stage.—A lady, named Sykes, residing at No. 403 Fourth-avenue, while riding in stage No. 34 of the Fourth-avenue and South Ferry line, had the pocket of her dress completely cut out by a light-fingered operator. In the pocket was a portemonnaie containing $200 in cash. The theft doubtless was committed by a female known as a "stage-buzzer." No arrest.

Another Boy Drowned.—A lad 8 years of age named Graham Reserve, while playing on Pier No. 54 East River, on Tuesday evening, accidentally fell overboard and was drowned. The body was recovered and claimed by the parents who live in the rear of No. 27 Frankfort-street. The Coroner was notified to hold an inquest.

Accidentally Drowned.—George Hoag, a boy 11 years of age, accidentally fell into the dock foot of Tenth-street, East River, on Tuesday afternoon and was drowned. The body was subsequently recovered and conveyed to the residence of his parents, No. 221 East Eleventh-street, where Coroner Collin was notified to hold an inquest.

A Clam-Bake Complimentary.—A complimentary clam-bake is to be given to-day to Mr. Solomon Kipp, late of the well-known firm of Kipp & Brown, at the River House, Harlem, by a large party of his friends. He is now proprietor of that establishment.

Bailed in $2,000.—Charles Devlin, Esq., late Street Commissioner, yesterday offered himself and was accepted as bail in $2,000, for Patrick Kiernan, who was committed by the Mayor on charge of riot and arson.

Found Dead.—Philip Monohan, a native of Ireland, 60 years of age, was found dead in the yard of premises No. 75 West Thirtieth-street. The cause of death is unknown. The Coroner was notified.

Shooting a Mad Dog.—Officer Jump, of the Twelfth Precinct, shot a mad dog in Avenue A, near One Hundred and Twenty-second-street. As far as known, no one had been bitten by the rabid animal.

NEW-JERSEY.

Robbery and Attempted Murder.—Tuesday afternoon a German, recently arrived in this country, named Charles Stockelin, architect and topographical engineer, accompanied by several friends, appeared before Recorder Martindale, of Jersey City, and entered a complaint against a man named Francis Vinckers, keeper of a lager-bier shop, and dealer in dogs, charging him with robbery, and attempting to take his life. It appears that on Monday the complainant, who is in the employ of Mr. Heovas, architect, at Newark, attended a pic-nic at Tivoli, remaining there until midnight. Upon returning to Newark, he found that he had been locked out, when Vinckers, who had also attended the pic-nic, and had represented himself as a friend of Mr. Heovas's, invited Stockelin to go to East Newark and stop at his house over night. The latter, supposing, of course, that if he was a friend of Mr. Heovas's it was all right, went over to East Newark, where the two arrived between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning. Upon entering the bar-room, Vinckers requested Stockelin to sit down while he went into the back room for a light. In a few minutes after Vinckers returned, and Stockelin was immediately set upon by two ferocious dogs, one of them said to be a blood-hound, and he was bitten and lacerated on his arms and legs in about twenty different places. While grappling with one of the animals, Vinckers rushed up and dealt him a heavy blow over the forehead with a sword which laid him insensible on the floor, inflicting a gash three inches in length. When Stockelin came to consciousness about daylight he found his money missing, and himself a prisoner locked in the room. Although very much exhausted from loss of blood, the injured man succeeded in making his escape through a window, and with his clothes torn to rags and covered with blood, made his way to the house of Mr. Stephenson, and the latter gentleman kindly conveyed him to Newark, where his wounds were properly dressed. A warrant was placed in the hands of Chief of Police Reily, and Detective Kingsbury, of Jersey City, and the officers, assisted by Chief Warnock, of Newark, arrested the accused at the latter named place. Vinckers was brought to Jersey City last evening and committed to the City Prison, to await an examination before Recorder Martindale.

Attempted Suicide by a Female.—Constable Lozier, a handsome young French girl, was brought to the station-house in Hoboken at midnight on Monday by two citizens, who found her at Bubble Cove in the act of committing suicide by attempting to drown herself. The young woman states that she resided in New-York, and having had some trouble, was determined to make away with herself, even though she had failed this time. Judge Pope gave her good advice, and kindly promised him that not the slightest attempt to destroy her life should be made in his presence, and a carriage was then procured, and the young woman was sent home to her residence.

The full penalty is $2,000 fine and twelve months' imprisonment, either or both, and we are sure that complaints will be rigidly prosecuted.

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

A Volunteer Wounded in the Riots.—A case especially worthy of the attention of the public is that of Myron Avery, a returned soldier, a member of the Eighth regiment, N. Y. S. N. G. He volunteered his services to aid in suppressing the riot, and joined the Zouaves, under Col. Winslow. On Wednesday, 15th inst., at the fight between the military and the rioters, corner of First-avenue and Nineteenth-street, he was shot while in the act of firing off a howitzer. The ball passed entirely through his knee, inflicting a terrible wound which will render him a cripple for life. After being wounded he was carried to a doctor's house in the vicinity, where he was tracked by the vengeful mob planning for and led by his blood. He had to escape hence by the rear, crawling, wounded as he was, over several fences, and finally utterly exhausted, fell in the yard of those who proved to be friends. They took him into the house and secreted him, the next morning kindly conveying him in a carriage to his home No. 5 Tenth-street. Mr. Avery is a young man of excellent habits, worthy, industrious, and while volunteering his services to the City has suffered an injury which will confine him a long time, and incapacitate him for the further pursuit of his business, which is that of a grain measurer.

LAW REPORTS.

Broadway Railroad—Injunction Against the Harlem Railroad Company Dissolved.

COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM—JULY 20.

Before Judge Sandford.

John J. Phelps et al. vs. The New-York and Harlem Railroad Company.—The hearing of the motion for a continuance of the injunction granted against the Harlem Railroad Company, restraining them from laying their track in Madison-avenue, in pursuance of the resolution of the Common Council permitting the extension of the Harlem Railroad through Broadway and Madison-avenue, was brought on this morning.

The plaintiffs, who are owners of property in Madison-avenue, appeared by their counsel, who conceded to the argument of the defendants' counsel, that, since the granting of the injunction, the Court of Appeals had decided in the case of the People vs. Kerr, adversely to the rights of the owners of property to maintain an injunction against the use of a street by a railroad.

It was suggested that the whole case having been decided by the Court of Appeals adversely to the plaintiffs, there was no ground for the further prosecution of the suit, and that it was an act of injustice to the Harlem Railroad Company to restrain them any longer from the exercise of their valuable rights.

The plaintiffs' counsel urged that, inasmuch as the decision of the Court of Appeals had been made since the commencement of this suit, and this suit had been commenced in good faith, the plaintiffs should be permitted to discontinue without costs. On this view the Court concurred, and an order was made dissolving the injunction and discontinuing the suit without costs.

The following order was entered:

The defendants in this action having appeared on the order heretofore made herein, requiring them to show cause why they should not be restrained from laying their track in Madison-avenue, under the resolution of the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, of April 21, 1863, and having moved that the argument of the motion be now brought on; and the plaintiffs having conceded that the decision of the Court of Appeals in the case of The People vs. Kerr and others, has adjudged adversely to the rights of the plaintiffs, as property owners, to maintain an action for such injunction, and that the law of the State, as established by that decision, was not generally regarded as the existing law at the time of the granting of the injunction order herein, and that, therefore, the plaintiffs should perhaps leave, under the circumstances, to discontinue, without costs.

After hearing counsel for the respective parties, it is adjudged by the Court that the injunction order heretofore granted, restraining the defendants (the New-York and Harlem Railroad Company,) from laying their track in Madison-avenue, be and the same is hereby dissolved, and that the plaintiffs have leave to discontinue this action without costs, and without prejudice to any rights of the plaintiffs.

Decision on the Construction of a Contract and the Payment of Import Duties.

COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM.

Before Judges Daly, Sutherland and Allen.

Otto W. Pollitz et al. vs. Melchior C. G. Wale.—The defendant in February, 1861, through a broker, purchased of the plaintiffs fifteen casks of cream of tartar at a stipulated price, to arrive by a certain vessel from Marseilles. At the time of the purchase the duty on the article was fixed at $12 per cask, and this rate of duty continued up to April 1 following, when cream of tartar was permitted, by a change of the tariff law, to be entered free of duty. The vessel arrived about March 18, and some days after, the plaintiffs, instead of delivering the article sold, entered it in bond at the Custom-house, and sent it to the public stores of the United States Government only from the 1st of April, it was taken by them, duty free, and delivered to and accepted by the defendant under his contract of purchase. In accordance with the terms of the same contract, he has paid the plaintiffs the price agreed, less $12 per cask, which was the duty chargeable at the time of the purchase, and also at the time the vessel arrived, and which he refuses to pay now, on the ground that the charge of the tariff inured to his benefit and not to that of the plaintiffs. To test this right this action is brought.

By the Court, Daly, J.—By their contract the plaintiffs were bound to deliver the cream of tartar within a reasonable time after the arrival of the vessel, and as the vessel arrived on the 9th of March, and fifteen days is the time allowed for a vessel to discharge, it follows, unless there were circumstances to excuse it, and the testimony of the broker shows that the plaintiffs were bound to deliver it at least by the 24th of March. If it had been delivered during that period, or at any time before the 1st of April, it would have been subject to a duty of $12 upon each cask, which the plaintiffs would have been compelled to pay. On and after the 1st of April, however, it was free of duty, and, therefore, to avoid the payment of it, the plaintiffs bonded the cream of tartar five days after the arrival and sent it, when discharged from the vessel, to the public store, where it remained until the 13th of April, when a permit was obtained for its delivery free of duty.

The plaintiffs insisted that they bonded it for the mutual protection of themselves and the defendant, and that they would have allowed the defendant the duty on such casks as were ready for delivery before the 1st of April; but they do not pretend that the defendant ever applied or consented to any such arrangement. On the contrary, they say that they proceeded upon the supposition that it would be ready for delivery before the 1st April, to bond it for the mutual benefit of themselves and the defendant; that is, as I understand, that if ready for delivery before the 1st of April, they would deduct the duty from the contract price; but if not passed before that time, they would claim the benefit for themselves of the non-payment of duty, and require from the defendant the payment of the full contract price. This, they say, however, the defendant would not agree to, and that then they determined to enter it in bond "anyhow," whether they were or the defendant was to have the benefit of its delivery free of duty.

It is very clear that they had no right to enter it in bond, to avoid the payment of duty, if the effect of it was to delay the delivery for a day, unless with the defendant's consent, and that the delivery of part of it, at least, was delayed by their doing so, appears by the fact that five of the casks were sent to the public store before the 1st of April.

On the part of the defendant, the broker who made the contract for the sale of the cream of tartar testified that he called upon the plaintiffs to request them to enter it in bond, that the defendant might have the benefit of the duty, and the plaintiff, Pollitz, finally agreed to do so upon the condition that the defendant would demand only invoice interest of actual tare. Pollitz denied that he had ever told the broker that the defendant would enter the goods for the benefit of the defendant, but that he told him that they would enter them in bond for the mutual protection of both parties; that they would allow the defendant the duty upon two casks that were to go into the public store before the 1st of April, and that the reason why they would not allow the duty upon the whole was because the whole would not be ready for delivery before the 1st of April; that if they could deliver them before the 1st of April, they would allow the duty, and that in that case nothing should be said about extra tare.

The question, then, is the case was whether the plaintiffs, in consideration that the defendant should demand only invoice tare, had agreed to enter the cream of tartar in the bond, that the defendant might have the benefit of the duty. Such an agreement made orally after the written contract would be a valid one, as it was founded upon a sufficient consideration; but that which was the only question arising upon the evidence, was taken away from the jury by the Judge, who told them that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover unless the defendant had proved that he had paid the duties, or was legally bound to pay them. Now, it was proved that no duty was ever paid; that the permit for delivery to the owner was obtained after the 1st of April, when the goods were free of duty; that a permit can be obtained only after the duties are either paid or remitted, and the plaintiff Pollitz testified distinctly that the defendant at no time had anything to do with the payment of duties, and that no duty was ever paid. For such reasons, therefore, as the payment of duties by the defendant, or of his liability for them, arising upon the evidence, the Judge might as well have told the jury in general terms that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, as there was nothing in the evidence showing that the defendant had any defence.

Whether the defendant was or was not entitled to have the amount of the duty deducted from the contract price depended upon the question whether the goods were put in bond under the agreement as sworn to by the broker. If opposed to the allowance of the invoice interest of the actual tare was less favorable to the defendant, and that with the agreement to waive his right to a strict delivery according to the contract constituted a sufficient consideration for an agreement on the part of the plaintiffs to put the goods in bond that they might be delivered after the 1st of April free of duty, and upon their being so delivered to deduct the amount of the duty from the contract price, and as the evidence was conflicting as to the existence or non-existence of such an agreement, it was a question of fact for the Jury.

It is now insisted that no such question could arise under the answer. That the answer sets up a delivery of the cream of tartar to the defendant subject to the payment of duties, the payment of which was assumed by the defendant, who had the goods entered in bond, whereas the duties were discharged from the payment of them, whereas by the evidence the goods were bonded by the plaintiffs, and were free of duty when they were delivered to the plaintiffs. There is this difference or variance between the answer and the proof, but that difference so gathered from either is substantially the same; that is, that the goods were bonded to avoid the payment of the duties, with the understanding between the parties that the defendant was to have the amount which might otherwise have been paid as duties deducted from the amount to be paid under the contract. The Code declares that no variances between the allegations in the pleading and the proof shall be deemed material, unless it has actually misled the other party to his prejudice, and that it did not have that effect in this case is inferrable from the fact that the plaintiffs interposed no objection on that account. If they had power in the power of the Court, under the 11 sub. of section 72, to allow the answer to be amended, and the conclusion therefore must be, from the plaintiffs taking no exception on that ground, but allowing the whole of the evidence to be received that they did not regard the variance as of any moment; that it did not prejudice them in maintaining their action. In Irving ex. Wetmore (2 E. D. Smith, 674,) the complaint was upon a special contract, and the recovery was had upon a quantum meruit, but we sustained the judgment, because the evidence was receivable, and the case submitted without interposing any objection on the ground of the variance. It was the duty of the Judge to have instructed the jury upon the case as it was presented to them upon the evidence, and not as it stood upon the answer, which alone could have supplied any foundation for the instruction he gave, and as that instruction was specifically excepted to, the judgment should be reversed.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Our Special Correspondent telegraphs from the Army of the Potomac, under date of yesterday, that the army now occupies practically the same line that it did two months ago, and that the recent active movements will necessarily be followed by a period of comparative inaction. During the next month the cavalry is expected to do most of the fighting. Our correspondent reiterates his statement that Longstreet's and Hill's commands passed through Thornton's, and not Chester, Gap, and says that they are now encamped between Culpepper and Gordonsville, while Ewell's corps, or the bulk of it, is now moving through the Shenandoah Valley—detachments of it occasionally threatening our outposts.

The rebel force which has advanced into Kentucky is ascertained to have nothing to do with Bragg's army, as the fears of the excited denizens of Lexington led them to suppose. The force is under command of Col. Pegram, and numbers between 1,500 and 2,000 men only. It crossed the Cumberland at Big Creek Gap, and moved toward Lexington, attacking and driving back a small force of National troops at Richmond. Gen. Burbridge, however, Morgan being effectually disposed of, will be fully able to attend to Col. Pegram, and it is considered doubtful whether he will be able to make his way back again to East Tennessee, as some of our troops are already in his rear.

The steamer Imperial, on her return trip from New-Orleans, arrived at St. Louis on Tuesday morning. She was greeted on her arrival by a large crowd of merchants and other citizens, and a National salute was fired in honor of the opening of the Mississippi. Another steamer sailed on Tuesday evening, for New-Orleans, with a large freight and a long passenger list.

The St. Louis Union of Saturday last says: "We received yesterday, by the steamer John D. Perry, New-Orleans papers of the 15th, and Memphis dates of the 23d inst. The New-Orleans papers came through direct—up the Mississippi River, past Port Hudson and Vicksburgh, to St. Louis. It is the first time that New-Orleans papers have come [illegible] on the old river, we believe, since the Spring of 1861—more [illegible] two years ago. Their arrival reminds us of the glorious, [illegible] old times when New-Orleans and St. Louis were in constant commercial communion, and the great river which washes the feet of both, was the trusty and willing messenger that executed their behests."

Gen. Herron reached Vicksburgh from Yazoo City on the 23d. He found very few people, and those there were in a suffering condition. He burned and destroyed all the rebel property, and administered the oath of allegiance to a considerable number of natives. Gen. Herron is ordered to New-Orleans, and will proceed thither with his army in transports.

The cotton used by the rebels on the intrenchments at Vicksburgh, is to be sold by order of Gen. Grant, and its proceeds distributed among the private soldiers as tribute of valor. Five per cent. of the private soldiers and non-commissioned officers are to be given furloughs for thirty days, in consideration of their bravery and endurance during the siege of Vicksburgh. The streets are to be thoroughly cleaned and sprinkled, and all carrion on the outskirts of the city is to be buried.

There was a rumor in Nashville on Saturday that Chattanooga had been captured by one division of Rosecrans' army, under the brave Gen. Sheridan, and that no rebels were found there. The telegraph would have confirmed the story by this time, had it been true.

A dispatch was received in Wheeling on Monday, from Gen. Kelley, announcing that he had recrossed the Potomac River, and would occupy Martinsburgh on Tuesday.

The commander of the brig W. B. Nash has arrived at this port from Bermuda, and makes a statement of the capture of his vessel by the pirate Florida, which took place on the same day the Ericsson was chased. He thinks the Florida's speed has been much overrated—that she cannot make over 8½ knots an hour, and that her machinery is getting out of repair. Her officers and crew were lionized at Bermuda, and the fort in the harbor of St. George gave her a salute as she passed in.

GENERAL NEWS.

Col. T. W. Higginson arrived in Worcester, Mass., on Monday, direct from his field of service in South Carolina, on a brief furlough.

The demand for Government Stock yesterday in this City reached nearly two and a half millions. The Secretary of the Treasury was in town, and extended the privilege of subscription after the 15th August, subject to discontinuance on ten days' notice. Stocks at the Exchange Board were buoyant. New-York Central 128½. Erie 103½ per cent. Gold 127½.

Breadstuffs and Provisions were in limited demand yesterday, at partially reduced prices. Cotton was in request, but was less buoyant. Sugars, [illegible] and Molasses were more active. Whisky [illegible] and declining. Most other articles were very moderately dealt in. Limited freight engagements were reported. There were 351 vessels of all classes in port.

The Strategy of Gen. Meade—Military Programme for the Future.

We observe in many directions a disposition to animadvert upon Gen. Meade for allowing Lee to "escape;" and even where the feeling is not so strong as this, there is at least a disposition to regret that the rebel commander should have been permitted to get away.

Now, these judgments on Lee's so-called "escape" proceed on the supposition that there has been a race between the hostile armies, and that the rebel chief, by superior strategy or superior speed, has got away from some fate which should have overtaken him had Gen. Meade done all he might have done. We are not aware that there has been any such race—that Gen. Meade has been endeavoring to reach Fredericksburgh, or Culpepper, or Gordonsville, in advance of Gen. Lee. It is true, we have had our cavalry following and on the flank of the retreating rebel force to watch its movements, but there has been no general manœuvre of the whole army with a view either to intercept Lee or forestall him in the possession of any given geographical point or line.

Whether such a movement might have been made or ought to have been made, is a quite other question. It need hardly be added that like all that pertains to the higher questions of warfare, it is a difficult and complicated one—not to be decided in an off-hand or general way. Certainly for Gen. Meade to have been able, by a rapid march on the flank of the rebel force, to have succeeded in planting his army on the communications of the rebel General, and compelled Lee to fight a battle with his back to the Potomac, would have been a bit of strategy of the grand type. But this involves the supposition, first, that it could have been done at all; and, secondly, that it could have been done without imperiling too much on our side.

With regard to the first question, two years' experience has pretty well settled the almost utter hopelessness of an effective pursuit of the rebels. Putting aside the subordinate causes that conspire to this result, the one great cause is, that from the fact of their occupying interior lines, they, in a retrograde movement, fall back on their base of supplies, while we move constantly from ours. The prodigious advantage this gives them must be apparent to any one acquainted with the material conditions that govern military movements—to any one who realizes the vast train required to supply a moving army with its food and forage and ammunition. Every mile shortens their line and brings them nearer to their base; every mile lengthens ours, takes us further away from our base, and renders advance progressively more and more difficult. With them it is a march to a point where their labors not only lighten, but end; with us it is an advance toward a point where, while the danger reaches its maximum, the difficulty, at the same time, reaches its. All these facts belong to the peculiarities of warfare in this country—peculiarities that make it altogether different from warfare in Europe, and which render all comparison futile. In reference to the special case of the campaign in Virginia, though it is true that in an advance of the two armies, the one by the left and the other by the right of the Blue Ridge Mountains, Gen. Meade would have the shorter line, and in a bare mathematical aspect would have over Gen. Lee an advantage represented by about thirty-three per cent., yet in view of all the multiform conditions that govern military operations the rebel commander would, in the gross, have over his pursuer an advantage of fully one hundred per cent.

So much for the possibility of such a movement. Now to consider for a moment its prudence. It is perfectly obvious, with the opportunity the mountains would afford Lee to mask all his movements, both how greatly our line of communications would be endangered, and also, what is more, how great a temptation would be offered the rebel chief to countermarch again on Washington, and throw things once more into confusion. It is true, Lee will not, we believe, lightly repeat the invasion dodge—it has been attempted twice, and neither time has proved a winning game; but it is none the less positive that he will not neglect any good opening to make a strike for that whose possession would amply repay the sacrifice of all else; none the less positive that in every front of operations or line of advance chosen by the commander of the Army of the Potomac, it must be such a front or line as will cover Washington.

Looking at the subject in all its bearings, we see no reason to believe that any pursuit of Lee has been attempted by Gen. Meade, or that he is in the slightest manner censurable for any "escape" that he has allowed Lee to make. And so far as concerns any supposed interference of the Government in Gen. Meade's plans leading to hinder a successful pursuit—for we have seen such charges made—it is, perhaps, worth while stating that there is not a word of truth in them: the military authorities at Washington expressly refused to give any opinion that might seem even to embarrass Gen. Meade's movements, and left the matter entirely in his own hands.

It is not possible for us to detect from any manœuvres Gen. Meade has yet made what front of operations he means to assume—whether the line of the Rappahannock, or one more to the right, toward Culpepper or Gordonsville. It is even not improbable that no active advance "on to Richmond" is intended at all from Virginia—that to the war-worn, battle-rent battalions of the Army of the Potomac may for the present be simply assigned the rôle of keeping Lee in check—holding that powerful rebel army in Virginia, and covering Washington, while active work is carried on elsewhere. [illegible] are capable of taking in the changed aspect of the military situation over the whole field of operations, wrought about by the late victories in the Southwest, will be prepared for an entirely new military programme. Who knows how much truth there may be in the reports the rebel officers who returned from Vicksburgh to Richmond brought with them, to the effect that portions of Grant's army that had left Vicksburgh announced on their departure that "they were going to Richmond!" If such a combination as we confidently look forward to shall be speedily effected between the magnificent armies of Grant and Rosecrans, we shall be able to get possession of the great mountain region, which, like a wedge, penetrates the heart of the Confederacy. From there we seize the great railroad line leading into Richmond—thus isolating the rebel Capital and compelling its evacuation. And not only Richmond, but we have at the same time the great main line of communication between the east and the west—between the central zone, the region of the production and distribution of all manner of supplies, and the left zone—the chief theatre of military operations. In thus severing them, we compel the evacuation of the whole of Virginia and the withdrawal of the rebel army into North Carolina. Rosecrans is even now planted securely within striking distance of Chattanooga, which may be regarded as a great natural bastion on the salient angle of the main line of communications between the East and the West. He only waits combination with Grant to move on it and on Knoxville.

We shall not be greatly surprised if we have no more advances "On to Richmond" by way of Virginia. Nor shall we be greatly sorry to see this bloody tragedy-comedy of marching forward and countermarching backward cease. With their interior lines and the numerous powerful positions they can take up—not to mention the circle of fortifications around Richmond—the rebels have enormously the advantage, and, indeed, we doubt if the capture of the rebel capital be possible by any line Virginia affords, without a force the double of what we have in the field.

But Richmond will be taken. The key to the situation is, as the rebels rightly conjecture, in the West.

The Two Armies.

We suppose our Washington dispatch, which announces that the Army of the Potomac now "occupies, practically, the same line that it did two months ago," means that Gen. Meade's army is again on the Rappahannock, at or in the vicinity of Falmouth—perhaps a few miles north of the old camping ground.

The army of Lee, or two corps of it, are encamped between Culpepper and Gordonsville, while Ewell's corps has not yet got down from the mountains. From this position they can march by a short and direct route to Fredericksburgh on the one hand, or to Richmond on the other.

Lee's policy for the present will undoubtedly be that of defence and inaction; and there are signs from Washington that the same policy is assigned to Gen. Meade. Circumstances and events, however, more than orders, have shaped or overturned policies in this war; and the manœuvres of the rebel army may compel an attack, or its position and condition may invite one, before Summer glides into Autumn.

The Delay in the Draft—What Means It?

Why does not the Government complete the draft in this City? Is it really truckling to the mob? Has its courage oozed out? These are questions that for the last week have been in the mouths of all true men, and it is high time they were explicitly answered. Evasions, and excuses, and ambiguous outgivings of what is going to be done to-morrow or next week, have had their day. The public has been surfeited with them up to the very verge of disgust. It has at last come to consider them nothing less than bald impostures; and we fear justly.

It is two weeks to-day since the mob got its final quietus. There has not been the slightest show of violence since to divert the attention of the authorities. It has been officially stated that all the necessary records pertaining to the draft were saved from the mob uninjured. There is, then, no internal impediment hindering the draft from going on as it started. Is there an external one? If so, where is it? Is it indeed true that the mob which originally arrested it is the agency which still keeps it back? Does that accursed horde of miscreants still rule this City? Does the National Government recognize them as a power, and has it, so far as relates to this town, abdicated in its favor? Things look prodigiously like it. A fortnight has passed, and yet not a sign of resuscitated Federal law. For all practical purposes, we might as well be at the antipodes, so far as relates to the National Government, except in the single particular of a taxation that "feelingly persuades us" there is yet some sort of a connection. If that is to be the only tie, it might, perhaps, be as well for the Government to cut us loose altogether. What we want—that is to say, what the majority of our people who are not robbers and outlaws want—is a show that we are still living under law, and that constituted authority still has an existence.

We have heard something said about Gov. Seymour's cyphering out a new quota for our City. If Gov. Seymour is really at that job, we advise the Government to make no account of it; or if it must, that it will put the business into hands that mean business, and not eternal paltering. There is no sum in simple addition and division that requires, in this City of figures, two weeks to be worked out. We are pretty sure there is nothing in this case that two hours could not settle, if there were any real earnestness in the operation. Our own opinion is that Gov. Seymour is using his slate for other purposes.

Then, too, it is said that the Common Council have taken the draft in hand, and are going, by some shoe-pegs management, to satisfy both the draft and the mob, without further trouble. The Government will sink beneath contempt, if it relegates its functions, in any style like that, to this or any other municipal body. In the first place, there is no power in any such body to assume any such obligations. The charter which brought it into existence confers upon it no such trust. It is as incapable in the premises as the last omnibus-load that went up Broadway. But, even were it otherwise, supposing it to be actually true that the Common Council of this City have a right to vote money for exemptions, that in no degree affects the obligation of the Government to enforce the laws of Congress. The Executive authorities in Washington have nothing to do with our Common Council, in respect to this more than in respect to any other statute. Their business here, as everywhere, is to carry out Congressional enactments in their just spirit and letter, and not to chaffer them away. The Government's imperative duty is to make the draft. If after the draft is made, substitutes for the men drafted are procured from any quarter, public or private, for they they would, under the law, have to be accepted. But this would be purely an ulterior procedure. It does not in the least touch the necessity of making the draft itself. That is the primary, indispensable duty, and there is no possible escape from it but in criminal nonfeasance.

Governor Seymour and the Common Council, may, if they choose, put themselves into complicity with the mob, by lending themselves to the promotion of its ends. That they seem to be thus disposed is humiliating to every decent citizen. But, in the name of the law-respecting men of this City, we demand that the National Government, for which they have without stint contributed their treasures and their blood, shall not thus tamper with the life-strings of our existence. Without law, we perish; and the mob which seeks to beat down law, is therefore our mortal enemy. An alliance with the mob in any form, by any authority, City, State or National, is public treachery. To suspend this draft, or in any way to modify it, because the mob so dictates, is to abet insurrection and anarchy; it is making us the victims of the wildest license just as often as scheming intrigue, or headlong passion, may choose to give it rein. If the National authorities thus yield, they will deserve nothing, and will receive nothing from the better portion of this community, but unqualified condemnation.

Shipbuilding in the West.

Mr. James B. Eads, the well-known gunboat builder of the West, has laid before the Navy Department a model, plans and specifications for building a first-class iron-clad ocean steamer in his Navy-yard at St. Louis. He proposes to make a vessel of the same class as to size and power of armament as the New-Ironsides.

The Navy Department is said to regard this project with favor. Indeed it is in accordance with ideas presented and elaborately argued by the Secretary of the Navy more than a year ago. The reasons in favor of a Navy-yard in the heart of the Continent, perfectly free from any contingency of interference from foreign Powers in time of war, where ships of the largest size may be constructed, are manifest. The only reason for our Government not having availed itself of the advantages of a ship-yard so situated, must be that it has never, before the present war, been made to realize the necessity of being able to arm and prepare for defence at every point of the Republic.

But the lesson is no longer needed. It is found in experience that important and powerful as the Mississippi River is as a channel of commerce, in time of peace, it is, if possible, even more valuable and serviceable to the nation as a means and avenue of attack and defence in time of war. Every day's development, since the beginning of the war in the West, has been calculated to magnify and impress this fact. The events of the past few weeks have confirmed what current history so plainly taught. In securing at last the absolute control of the channel of the great river, from its source to the Gulf, the country feels and reasons that it has mastered the rebellion, and assumed a military position that may safely defy any combination of powers that may be made in the future against the United States Government. For with the Mississippi River in our possession, which our own fleet can navigate but no hostile fleet can, with its rich valleys of thousands of miles length and variable, indefinite breadth, which no invading foe can reach, to raise and subsist armies in, it is impossible to conceive that anything short of the judgment of heaven can break our military power. The nation, in this grand interior basin, secure in its unity and integrity through the unremitting, resistless flow of the mighty Mississippi to the ocean, becomes a power greater for defence than any other on the globe. It gathers into its control the resources of a Continent, uses rivers, aptly called "inland seas," for its transportation, and has mountain ranges for its interior defences.

It only remains that the Government place the Mississippi Valley in such state of defence as its valor and most liberal efforts and sacrifices in behalf of the Union cause have justly earned. And nothing is more important, to this end, than the encouragement of shipbuilding at some convenient point on the Mississippi River, whereby artisans may be trained for the work, the Western material of wood and iron suitable for ships developed and tested, and a proper naval spirit begotten and educated in that hitherto altogether inland and agricultural people. In case this nation ever has war growing out of events in Mexico, and the Gulf becomes a battle-ground, we shall feel better if we can pour out armed ships as well as armies from the Mississippi River.

There seems to be no reason why St. Louis should not make a trial of building and fitting a first-class iron-clad "ship-of-war" to see. For nine months in the year, on an average, there is water enough to float such a vessel as the New-Ironsides from that city to the Gulf. Every article needed in the manufacture can be had there. And no city on the Continent, having like advantages for reaching the ocean, is so difficult of approach by a foreign enemy. Mr. Eads has built a number of the Western gunboats that have rendered such signal service in "opening the Mississippi," and has a large experience and a well-earned character for probity and fidelity in his contracts, that entitle his plans to consideration.

Warning to Parents.—Our local columns, this morning, contain mention of a boy, five years old, who was drowned in the North River on Tuesday; of another boy, eight years old, who was drowned in the East River on the same day; of another boy, eleven years old, who was drowned the same day in the same river; of a man who was drowned the same day, in the North River; and of the dead body of another man being found in the same water. Not a day passes but there are more or less men and boys who lose their lives in the rivers skirting this City. Some of the men may be drunk or crazy, but this cannot be said of the children. It is the result of carelessness or folly. Parents who value their children should be careful about permitting them to play at large in the vicinity of the piers, or to go in swimming amid the deep and dangerous currents that prevail in these parts of the North and East Rivers.

Labors of the Sanitary Commission.

The people ought not to lose sight of the immense work which the Sanitary Commission is doing for the aid and relief of the army. Since the battle of Gettysburgh it has sent to the Army of the Potomac alone over 20,000 pounds of fresh bread, 20,000 pounds of fresh mutton and poultry, 10,000 pounds of condensed beef soup, 3,000 pounds of condensed milk, 5,000 pounds of fresh butter, 10,000 dozen of fresh eggs, 5 tons of fresh vegetables, 4,000 pounds of sweet chocolate, 4,000 pairs of shoes and slippers, 1 ton of tamarinds, 300 boxes of lemons and oranges; of jellies, farinaceous food, wines, spirits, cordials, sponges, towels, lint, bandages, socks and hospital clothing, many car-loads.

Its operations at the West and Southwest are on a scale of equal magnitude, and their value to the National cause has been publicly recognized in general orders. The zeal and self-devotion of its agents is shown by the fact that three of them are now prisoners at Richmond, and that several have lost their lives by disease contracted in the discharge of their duties.

The expense incurred in the purchase of clothing, stimulants and stores of every kind, and of horses and wagons to transport them, (so as to escape the inevitable delays of Government transportation,) in the employment of the best medical aid, and in the other labors of the Commission is necessarily great. Since the 15th of June last, the Commission has expended more than one hundred and twenty-three thousand dollars for these objects, and its receipts from the public bounty, on which it is wholly dependent, have been less than forty-one thousand dollars.

It is evident that the Commission will soon be obliged either to contract its operations more materially or to close its depots and retire from the field altogether, unless its treasury be largely replenished. This would be especially unfortunate at the present time, when a great body of troops is about to be mustered into service, needing all the aid the Commission can give to prevent them from suffering the consequence of inexperience and ignorance of Sanitary Laws.

The following letter has been handed to us for publication:

Surgeon General's Office,
Washington City, D. C., July 20, 1863.

My Dear Doctor Ballows: I feel as if I could never thank you too much for the aid rendered by yourself and other members of the Sanitary Commission, to the wounded at Gettysburgh. But for you and the other benevolent persons who came to our relief, things would have gone much harder with the sufferers than they did.

Your labors were of such a character as to call forth the commendations of all who knew of them, and I should be neglectful of my duty if I did not tell you how deeply grateful I am for all you have done.

Yours, sincerely,
WILLIAM A. HAMMOND, Surgeon-General.

The Administration of the National Government.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

At home and abroad, in Europe and in the United States, in months past, I have heard both natives and foreigners charge our National Government with all manner of faults and crimes, and especially of being imbecile, unstable and accomplishing nothing. The reasons for this are many; yet with natives are chiefly two: First, the vast sympathy of the political, commercial and social relations of the Republic with the rebel States, manifests itself at home by railing at the Administration, who strive with their might to overthrow the power of the rebellion. The noisiest railers are confessed rebel sympathizers. Second, The natural impatience of the suffering community to finish the struggle leads a number of our countrymen to censure the Administration without considering the time it takes either to found or to overthrow a great and fortified Power.

The same accusations are made in the mouths and in the presses of Europeans, principally for two reasons. First, because they are monarchists, naturally hostile to a Republic, and eager to censure a Democratic Administration, to condemn its proceedings and to pervert its acts and its designs. Second, England and France give tone to public opinion in Europe, and these two Powers add to their natural dislike of a Republic a jealous, and perhaps a wholesome, dread of the giant power of this growing Republic. They heartily wish and fondly believe it already broken, divided and ruined. To this end their organs make the welkin ring with calumnies upon the men and measures, the arms and the aims of the National Administration; for the origin of which calumnies they are largely indebted to the Opposition Presses of our own country. But I notice a marked difference between the governing classes of France and England and the common people. The people are not corrupted, either by hatred of our institutions, or by the dread of our national power, as the governing classes are, with many honorable exceptions.

That no human Administration is faultless, and that the amount of odium excited at home and abroad against President Lincoln's is extraordinary, may be admitted, while proceeding to consider whether it deserves not great honor instead of rash censure.

Thirty months ago this Administration came into power under the provisions of the Constitution by a minority vote, in the face of a widespread, organized rebellion, and also, in the midst of treachery, its head being waylaid on the road to his inauguration, and forced to protect his life from the snares of assassins. The Administration found [illegible] and Navy, and [illegible] public credit. The rebellion soon took the Confederate form in eleven States, and held four more, Missouri, Kentucky, Maryland and Delaware, with the District of Columbia itself in [illegible] which side in title, whether with the rebellion, or with the Union.

Such, in brief, was the state of the Republic when the present Administration came into power. Now see what this Administration have done.

They have confirmed the four doubtful States in the Union. They hold and control the relations of five States of the Confederacy—Arkansas, Louisiana, Tennessee, Mississippi and Florida. They have also powerful armies in all the remaining rebel States, and possess strong fortresses in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. Such are some of the triumphs of the Administration's armies, already secured.

Instead of the shadow of a navy, the Administration have bought, built, manned and equipped a fleet of five hundred vessels of war, and are preparing many more, to maintain the national honor against all enemies, looking first to the defence of our own harbors and coasts, and afterward to the protection of our commerce on the high seas.

Instead of an empty treasury and fallen credit, the Administration have an immense amount of money at an average of less than four per cent. interest, and borrow all they want at 6 per cent., with receipts in gold through the customs to pay twice the amount of the annual interest, and a revenue from internal taxes, cheerfully paid, sufficient annually to discharge many millions of the principal.

For our Home Department, all the great interests of the country, except commerce, are in a very flourishing state. The products of agriculture, manufactures, mines, railroads and canals, were never before so large and flourishing. And for our Foreign Department, the rights, interests, and honor of our country have in no period of our history been more ably sustained than by our present Secretary of State.

It is not fair, it is not honest, to charge the Administration with imbecility. Coming into power thirty months ago empty-handed, with so much already accomplished, we have a right to expect in twenty months to come, with the means at present in hand, they will acquire for themselves and for our country a reputation the very reverse of that which rebels and rebel sympathizers, at home and abroad, industriously labor to fasten on them. The National Administration is honest, indefatigable, and very successful, judged by its fruits. It deserves, and may shortly need, the support of every lover of freedom, to defend our Republican institutions against the direct assault of monarchists, under the lead of the Imperial Louis Napoleon.

Justice.

Brig.-Gen. Strong Vincent.

The following touching order was issued upon the death of Brig.-Gen. Strong Vincent, who gallantly commanded the Third brigade of the First division of the Fifth corps, at the battle at Gettysburgh, until mortally wounded. It was this brigade which seven times repulsed the enemy in his repeated attempts to turn our extreme left flank, in the battle of Thursday, July 2:

Headquarters Third Brigade, July 12, 1863.

General Order No. 7.—The Colonel Commanding hereby announces to the brigade the death of Brig.-Gen. Strong Vincent. He died near Gettysburgh July 7, 1863, from the effects of a wound received on the 2d inst., and within sight of that field which his bravery had so greatly assisted to win. A day hallowed with all the glory of success, is thus sombered by the sorrow of our loss. Wreaths of victory give way to chaplets of mourning—hearts exultant, to feelings of grief. A soldier, a scholar, a friend has fallen. For his country, struggling for its life, he willingly gave his own. Grateful for his services, the State which proudly claims him as her own will give him an honored grave and a costly monument, but he ever will remain buried in our hearts, and our love for his memory will outlast the stone which shall bear the inscription of his bravery, his virtues, and his patriotism.

While we deeply deplore his death and remember with sorrow our loss, let us each emulate the example of his fidelity and patriotism, feeling that he lives but in vain, who lives not for his God and his country. By command of Col. J. C. Rice,

Commanding Third Brigade.

Geo. B. Hendrick, A. A. A. G.

The Ladies' National Army Relief Association.—A vigorous effort is now in progress to give increased energy to the operations of this important organization by securing larger donations to assist it in prosecuting its philanthropic labors. The Ladies' Army Relief Association occupies a field of labor which no other organization completely fills. Its agents, who are women of tried experience, engage themselves about the hospitals and upon the battle-field, conveying food and nourishment to the wounded, and caring for them in every way in which the Government nurses cannot look after them. Although their functions are of the first importance they are not recognized by the Government, nor do they receive any pay for it, hence the necessity of private contributions. Mrs. Senator Harlan is President of the Association; Mrs. S. P. Eaton Vice-President; Mrs. E. Sparks, of Washington, Secretary, and Judge J. M. Gardner, of the Land Office, Washington, Treasurer.

The Great Question.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Shall the worst part of the population of the City of New-York be permitted to determine the character and the destiny of the Government of the United States for centuries to come?

That this is the question will appear from the following statements:

1. The City of New-York exerts a great, if not a controlling political influence, throughout the State and the nation.

2. The Anti-Government party of this City depends for its power and supremacy on the lowest, most vicious, most ignorant and most depraved part of the population. Remove from the City all its dangerous citizens, all its corrupt, venal Judges, all who love rum, pillage, theft and murder—all who are controlled by priests, and the Copperhead party would be left in a hopeless minority.

3. The Copperhead party of this City made one of the late mobs, and is still using all its power to intimidate the Government of the United States and control its policy.

4. The Government of the United States is now, in an important sense, in a formative state. It is like a block of marble in the hands of an artist. The Copperhead mob of New-York, or its managers, are determined to be the artist, who shall give shape and expression to the marble; or, to vary the simile, the materials which are to make up the future United States are now melted in the crucible of civil war. The mob of New-York would prepare the mould into which these melted materials shall be cast, and would, with its own hands, pour the materials into the mould. Shall it be permitted to do so?

Answer, President Lincoln. Answer, all true, intelligent patriots. Yours, truly, M. H.

A Nice Question.

Washington, Monday, July 27, 1863.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It is said here, "in well-informed circles," that the British Government will recognize the Messieurs as belligerents, and straightway sanction the shipment of cannon, &c., to them by way of Nassau. A gentleman was heard to say of them: "Ah! they are belligerents sure, I'm o' mind." How is it?

Respectfully, SETH MARVIN, Jr., Printer.

Canal Breaks.

Albany, Wednesday, July 29.

It is not expected that canal boats will reach tide-water, on account of the break at Spraker's, before to-morrow.

THE NEW-YORK SCHUTZEN CORPS.

THEIR THREE DAYS' FESTIVAL

List of Prize Shots—The King and his Coronation.

For three successive days and nights have the members of the

and their friends had a season of enjoyment and good cheer at their annual festival at Jones' Wood. It may not be uninteresting for our readers to know somewhat concerning its origin and its purposes. In the middle ages hundreds of Germans belonged to corps of sharpshooters, for the purpose of self-protection. The general corps were parts of a centralized body called the Schutzen corps, and were subject to the order of a Commander or King. For many years the shooting of these men were frowned upon by the rulers, but subsequently were legalized, and became the occasion for the gatherings and enjoyment of the people.

In New-York we have also a Schutzen corps, whose beliefs in human liberty and progression are identical with those of their brethren across the water, who meet annually for the same purposes of rifle practice and of social recreation, and who, in their organization, consider themselves a component part of the Associations of the Old World, of which the Duke of Coburg-Gotha is President-in-Chief. This Grand Club is called the Schutzen Band, which holds its meetings bi-annually in one of the fine cities of Germany. Their last gathering was at Frankfort-on-the-Main in 1862, when some 50,000 riflemen were present, and one of the finest demonstrations ever known was made. Next year they meet at Bremen, and this New-York corps intends going over in its full strength, and partake in the sports and festivities of the occasion.

The organization of the corps here, which has existed since 1857, is as follows: Capt. H. D. Bosch; Secretary, E. G. Dennewolf; Financial Secretary, F. Meyer; Treasurer, W. Rosenthal; King for 1862-3, Corneliuse Rapken.

The festival of this year was commenced on Monday last at Jones' Woods, and continued during Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, concluding this morning at 3 o'clock.

The principal feature of the sports consisted in the determination of

for the current year. This question was settled in the following manner: A large target, consisting of the regulation Austrian eagle, 14 feet by 10 feet, was set upon the top of a very high pole. The eagle had two heads, two feet, two wings and a body, a crown on each head, a flag coming out of the center of the circle, a ring in each mouth, and numerous other emblems attached to various parts of the body. Each one of these parts of the body and emblems was shot at in the order as given, being given to the member that may the particular part first hit.

When the abdomen, which is the last part dived at, is shot away, the person securing it is declared King for the following year. He also receives $50, and a gold medal worth $35, as the first prize. The second prize is $25, and belongs to him who drops the right wing. The left wing secures the third prize; $15 is the fourth prize, and belongs to the fourth shot. A medal is given to him who shoots the eagle on a pole rising seven feet above the middle of the eagle. The tail is the fifth prize, of $15. Fourteen other prizes, of $10 each, are distributed, every prize being the reward of some one of the emblems shot away.

THE FIRST AND SECOND DAYS.

These was not a very full attendance, although many of our German citizens and their families were present. The shooting attracted considerable attention. The lager was excellent and enjoyed, universal good feeling prevailed, and the waltz, the favorite of all dances with our good-natured and jovial Teutonic citizens, was to the contrary. It was reserved for the

to develop the interest which thousands of our citizens take in the Schutzen corps. The final shooting, the crowning of the King, the ladies' ball, the dinner, the fancy dancing, and, above all, the great crowd were reserved for this occasion.

By 12 o'clock noon, there were full three thousand persons of all sexes and ages, on the ground.

Upon the arrival of our reporter, the bodies of the eagle were in full bloom. The former part of the destined (Austrian) bird had been shot away, great chunks of ball-riddled wood had fallen on the ground, but the claws and abdomen remained to be shot away.

As the day wore away, and the bird's dimensions grew smaller by degrees, the crowd augmented numerically until at 6 o'clock there were between 2,000 and 3,000 people in the different parts of the grounds.

A shout from the members of the shooting corps drew attention to the target, which, upon telescopic examination, proved to be simply a sliver of wood, measuring perhaps four inches in length and a half an inch in breadth. To hit this and shoot it away was now the trial before them; to do it would require skill, but would also insure to the fortunate marksman the kingly title and golden insignia of rank and station.

For two or three hours the contest continued. Occasionally a ball would strike the iron upright, but many a shot was fired in vain; but time after time the roll was called, until finally Mr. Habeta, a modest but clear-eyed Teuton, sent forth the ball that did the work, and entitled him to the royal prerogative.

This ended the shooting sport, and the following was declared to be the official

LIST OF PRIZE SHOTS:

C. Mabuken, middle crown.
H. Runken, right crown, (no count.)
F. Reise, right flag.
C. Scholl, left flag.
Mr. Bechran, left crown.
Jno. Wessels, left wing.
F. Koster, sceptre.
H. G. Dempwolf, royal globe and cross.
H. Koster, left head.
H. Koster, right wing.
G. Leursen, left wing.
H. Koster, left neck, (no count.)
H. G. Dempwolf, right neck.
F. Repper, right claw.
F. L. Schunemann, left claw.
J. Busch, tail.
Mr. Hoetge, the last piece.

"HAIL TO THE KING!"

Was the instant cry, and the thousands of spectators crowded about the newly-chosen monarch, to congratulate him upon his near approach to honor and to power. Capt. Busch at once drew up the members of the corps and, preceded by the band, went to the Somers House for the boys of little ones who were to crown the King and instal him upon his throne. The crowd meanwhile rushed to the platform in the centre of the lawn, where the coronation ceremonies were to take place.

Soon the strains of martial music attracted every ear and eye, and down the lawn were seen coming the members of the corps, their present and their future king, and a company of beautiful blonde-faced children, dressed in white, and garlanded with flowers.

THE PROCESSION

was headed by King Reppen and King elect Habeta, followed by Capt. Busch and the corps, as guard of honor to about fifty of the prettiest of little girls.

Cheer upon cheer were given, and the recipient thereof modestly and courteously acknowledged them, while King Reppen instructed him in the duties of his office. The time having arrived, a sweet young miss of about 12 years of age—Miss Francis Kirkemeyer by name—ascended the platform, and in an exceedingly beautiful address, notified Mr. Habeta that in consequence of his skill, he was thenceforth for a year to be their king, after which the band played "God Save the King."

Mr. Louis Kirkemeyer then delivered a very patriotic, and really eloquent address upon the rights and duties of a free people, and urging all in the reach of his voice to continue in the performance of their duties as good Union-loving citizens, to uphold the enforcement of the laws and the rulers in whose charge they were. This was received with great applause, after which the band of little ones sang the "Star Spangled Banner," in the chorus of which some five thousand stout voices joined, with an effect indescribably grand.

Ex-King Reppen, who was accompanied by a very beautiful lady, bowed his abdication, while Capt. Busch, in behalf of the corps, saluted King Habeta, and fastened upon his breast the medal and other insignia of kingly office.

The vast crowd again and again cheered their monarch, who, supported on either hand by a little flower-decked girl, marched at the head of his subjects to the bountiful dinner spread for them at the Somers House upon the hill.

But time and space fail us to tell of the prize shooting by the ladies; the rocking base rides; the scenes and incidents attending the grand carnival of dance and the superb dinner given by Mr. Somers; private shootings of Sunday editorial representatives; the sly flirtations or the more open demonstrations of regard; the thousand and one matters of interest subsequently arose, and all is, therefore, compressed in the remark that the festival was decidedly a great success.

To Mr. Somers, the proprietor of the house and grounds; to Capts. Busch, King Reppen, and Secretary Dennewolf, belongs the credit and the honor of the festival. At no time has there been afforded more enjoyments, been witnessed better shooting, been gathered fairer women or more gentle-hearted men than were enjoyed, witnessed and gathered during the three days of the Festival of the New-York Schutzen Corps.

Gen. Hunter of Old Ironsides—The Battle in the Harbor.

The following letter is of sufficient interest to warrant its publication. The statement from the TIMES, criticised in the first paragraph, was based upon authority as high as any denial of it can be:

WASHINGTON, Monday, July 27, 1862.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Permit me to correct an error which appeared in an editorial upon the Siege of Charleston, published in the TIMES of last Saturday—an error unimportant as regards the argument of the article, but very serious to the officer against whose reputation it aims a blow.

The TIMES states in the editorial in question that, "previous to the first attack upon Charleston by the iron-clads, Gen. HUNTER notified Admiral DUPONT that the navy need expect no help from the land forces, who, on account of the paucity of their numbers, could only act as a garrison for any captures made by the navy." (I have not a copy of the paper by me, and only quote the substance of the statement from memory.) For the statement contained within quotation marks, there exists not the slightest foundation.—Gen. HUNTER having acted in the fullest concord with the Admiral, and having made all preparations for a movement precisely analogous (though not identical in circumstances) to that which has since been made by Gen. GILLMORE.

Let me state a few facts, which would not have been proper to have divulged at an earlier date:

On the night previous to DUPONT'S attack upon Fort Sumter, Col. HOWELL'S brigade was thrown across from Coles to Folly Island, while Gen. TERRY'S division was also partially landed and partially retained on board light draft transports in the Stono.

On the day of the bombardment troops were stationed on the northern end of Folly Island, behind the screen of timber immediately facing Lighthouse Inlet; and here, under the immediate superintendance of Gen. THOMAS SEYMOUR, Gen. HUNTER'S Chief of Staff and of Artillery, all arrangements were made for a crossing the next night. Surf and India-rubber pontoon-boats were in readiness, and three full batteries of rifled guns were upon the ground to cover the crossing.

All officers, both of the army and navy, who had studied the problem, were of opinion that no good could be effected by our small force of troops on Morris Island, unless aided in their attack by a cross-fire from the navy upon Forts Wagner and Cumming's Point; and this the more especially, as our troops in moving up the Island to attack Fort Wagner, would be exposed to the enfilading or cross-fire, from the barbette guns of Fort Sumter.

It was very generally believed by both navy and army, that DUPONT'S attack upon Fort Sumter would reduce that work to a heap of brick, mortar and dismounted guns, while in twelve hours from the first shot, within my very many circle of observers, who did not expect to have Fort Sumter silenced and the garrison either driven out or captured within two days. Such being the all but universal impression, it was arranged between the Admiral and Gen. HUNTER, that the crossing of Lighthouse Inlet and the attack upon Morris Island, should not be made until the day following the iron-clad attack upon Fort Sumter, as the expected retraction of that work would not only save our troops from its enfilading fire while advancing up the Island, but would also, in all probability, greatly demoralize the garrisons both of Wagner and Cumming's Point.

All know, only too well, how bitterly the calculations based on the irresistibility of the iron-clads were disappointed. All know that in place of reducing Fort Sumter in twelve hours, the iron-clads were, for the most part, disabled to a greater or less extent within forty-five minutes from the commencement of the attack; and all who will read the evidence of Capts. DRAYTON and WORDEN, in the Senate Court of Inquiry, will see how completely Admiral DUPONT was justified in his resolve to abandon the attack until further reinforced by additional iron-clads, and until certain defects in those he had (only revealed under fire) could be remedied.

It was upon the communication of this resolve by the Admiral to Gen. HUNTER that the crossing of Lighthouse Inlet, then imminent, was countermanded—a copy of the Admiral's letter being carried by Col. HALPINE to the northern end of Folly Island, where Gen. SEYMOUR was then busily engaged with Major DUANE, United States Engineer; Capt. HAMILTON, United States artillery; Capt. BAYLOR, United States steamer Pawnee, and Cols. DANDY, GUSS and HOWELL, superintending the final preparations for pushing across Lighthouse Inlet—Capt. BAYLOR, if I am not mistaken, having kindly volunteered his assistance to Gen. SEYMOUR, who was to command the attack on the lower end of Morris Island.

Seeing that it would be utter madness to cross without the cooperation of the navy, Gen. SEYMOUR, whose whole heart was in the matter, and who, in conjunction with Major DUANE, had been laboring night and day for a fortnight previously to make sure that the land forces should be in a position to render efficient service, at once, after a brief consultation with Gen. HUNTER, started off to visit Admiral DUPONT, for the purpose of urging that such of the iron-clads as were fit for service should be employed in covering the crossing and distracting the fire of Forts Wagner and Sumter. In this mission he failed, the Admiral knowing the injured state of the iron-clads thoroughly, and being fearful lest some one or more of them should fall into the hands of the enemy—an event which would indeed "raise the blockade" of Charleston, without any assistance either from England or France.

But so earnest, almost passionate, was Gen. SEYMOUR in his desire to be allowed to attempt the crossing and attack, that he urged Gen. HUNTER to let the attack proceed, even after it was known that no cooperation from the navy could be hoped. To this Gen. HUNTER strongly and peremptorily objected; and it was for the purpose of impressing his views upon the Administration that Gen. SEYMOUR, immediately after the abandonment of the attack, proceeded to Washington, where he had interviews with Gen. HALLECK, Secretary STANTON and the President.

Let it be borne in mind, that at the time of this first attack the rebel army appeared everywhere victorious, and that heavy reinforcements had been sent to Charleston (which was then the main point of interest) by Gen. LEE, from the Army of Virginia, by Gen. HILL from North Carolina, and by Gen. BRAGG from Tennessee. There were then in, and within supporting distance of Charleston—in its works and upon the surrounding islands—a force of rebel regulars and volunteers, amounting to between forty-five and fifty thousand men; while many thousands of irregular militia, from the interior and surrounding States, are also reported in the rebel papers to have been on hand. All the spare soldiers from the garrisons of Savannah and Mobile, and all the troops at Pocotaligo and along the railroad between Savannah and Charleston had been concentrated under BEAUREGARD, for the purpose of resisting this long-bruited and widely exaggerated attack.

To those who would blame Gen. HUNTER—an officer possessing a gallantry which even his enemies admit—for not having made the attack on Morris Island, I would respectfully submit this proposition:

If Gen. GILLMORE, with substantially the same force wielded by Gen. HUNTER, (Gen. BIRNEY'S brigade, since sent to North Carolina, having been intended to operate on Seabrooks and James Islands, and not on Folly and Morris Islands,) and with the active and intense cooperation of an uninjured navy, has been thus far slaughterously repulsed in his attacks upon Fort Wagner, the forces defending Charleston being now less than one-fourth what they were at the first assault—what would have been the fate of Gen. HUNTER, what punishment could have been too heavy for his ambitious rashness or madness, had he, with the same land force and without the cooperation of the navy (too severely injured to do anything,) attempted an attack against four times the weight of troops now engaged in the defense of the "cradle of secession?"

To this question the common sense of the country will not be slow to reply.

I may add that neither by President LINCOLN nor by Gen. HALLECK was Gen. HUNTER held censurable for his conduct upon that, or upon any other occasion. In the esteem of both the high officials named, he stands to-day prominent as an officer at once brave and prudent, a disciplinarian not excelled by any other Commander in our army, and as the possessor of administrative abilities (coupled with high integrity) which have made every Department he has had charge of conspicuous for its excellent management, the good condition of its troops, and the economy of all its discovering bureaus. To all the details of administration Gen. HUNTER gave as close attention as was given by Maj.-Gen. DIX to the same subject in the Department of Virginia.

To the commonly repeated story that Gen. HUNTER has been "attending to negro schools, Gideonite prayer-meetings," &c., &c., &c., while he "should have been devoted to his military duties," the answer is extremely simple: Except to negro soldiers, with arms in their hands, he has no more to say to the negro population of the Department of the South than had the persons who make these charges against him. All of the colored population, women, children, &c., not in the army, are under the exclusive supervision of Rev. Dr. CHAS. G. EAMES, Superintendent of Contrabands and Plantations, now styled Military Governor; and while, as a Christian gentleman, and man of tender sympathies for all who are weak, needy, or oppressed, Gen. HUNTER did devote many spare half-hours to watching the progress of an experiment in which he knows the future of this country to be so deeply involved—it may astonish many to hear—no unremitting was his attention to his strictly military duties as Department headquarters that but twice during the whole of his late administration of the Department of the South, extending from January to June, could he afford time enough to be present at the educational and religious exercises of the great contraband establishments at Beaufort. Once in the afternoon he there attended a festival of the Colored Schools, having reviewed the troops in the morning; and once he attended church there, on an occasion in which the Chaplain on Gen. HUNTER'S Staff delivered an address to his congregation.

THE BLIND SHALL SEE AND THE DEAF SHALL HEAR.—We are not among those who indorse every quack who pours himself to the public as a professor of impossible cures. There is a limit to everything, and what cannot be done even through the best aids of science, is out of the realm of the possible. A man born without optic nerves cannot be made to see, nor can one without eustachian tubes be made to hear; but, we believe, those with the necessary physical developments, who have, by disease or accident, been deprived of the blessings of sight or sound, under the manipulations of Dr. VON EISENBERG, can by skill to enjoy both. The Doctor is a scientific specialist and surist. In these departments of medical and surgical knowledge his experience is without parallel—his success commensurate with his experience. We have heard of many instances in this City, in which he has made cures or procured positive relief for sufferers where every other resource has absolutely failed. Many call these results "wonderful," "miraculous," and in an age when science was less cultivated than it now is, they would truly be so regarded; but the Doctor works by sure means, and the results correspond with his confidence and skill. We could mention many cases wherein he has effected a speedy cure amongst the friends of the Christian Times, but we refrain from so doing, since we presume we desire those who have "eyes to see and hears to hear," but who from causes are deprived of their use, to visit him personally and assure themselves of his capabilities.—New-York Dispatch.

DR. VON EISENBERG,
Author of "Surgical and Practical Observations on the Diseases of the Ear, with his new Mode of Treatment."
No. 696 Broadway, near Fifth-st.

NEW TESTIMONY.

NEW-YORK, May 1.

I was entirely deaf in my left ear, accompanied by a discharge. I placed myself under Dr. VON EISENBERG'S care, who, by his great skill, restored me to perfect hearing, in the short space of a few minutes, without giving me the slightest pain, and the discharge has ceased entirely. The Eustachian Tube, which was obliterated, is quite open, and I feel that the air-passages perform its functions. I am amply satisfied, and shall recommend every one suffering from impaired hearing to place themselves under the treatment of this eminent and successful physician.

THOMAS GRAHAM, No. 202 6th-st."

NEW-YORK, May 1, 1862.

I have great pleasure in testify to the skill of Dr. VON EISENBERG. I was led into his office almost completely deaf, and came out with my perfect hearing. It is nearly twelve months since, and the hearing is perfect. The operation, which lasted two or three minutes in each of my ears, gave me no pain whatsoever. I, with confidence, recommend all sufferers to place themselves under Dr VON EISENBERG'S unsurpassing skill.

No. 6 Monroe-st., Greenpoint, L. I.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 6, 1862.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for about seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

I considered Dr. VON EISENBERG, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I first saw. It is therefore, due to Dr. VON EISENBERG to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain.

JOHN TAYLOR.

NEW-YORK, July 15, 1862.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other inflictions of a total loss of hearing. Dr. VON EISENBERG removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with congealed blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CARROLL J. POST, No. 28 South-st.

SIGHT RESTORED.

JUNE 28, 1862.

My daughter brought me to Dr. VON EISENBERG almost completely blind in both eyes. I could not bear the pain nor the light. I am completely cured by Dr. VON EISENBERG, and called now to express my gratitude to the Doctor for his skill and unremitting attention, by which I recovered one of the most precious senses to me after being deprived of it for four years. It is only due to Dr. VON EISENBERG to state that I have tried several physicians in vain. I shall be happy to bear personal testimony to Dr. VON EISENBERG'S unrivaled success to any lady or gentleman who will call on me.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.
READ

New-York, March 29, 1862.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up, accompanied by constant nasal discharge, the child snuffing every day with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

A NEW NOVEL, BY MRS. OLIPHANT,
PUBLISHED THIS DAY,
HEART AND CROSS.
By Mrs. OLIPHANT,
Author of "Margaret Maitland," "Laird of Norlaw," etc.
Paper cover, 50 cents; cloth, 63 cents.
Being Number Three of our NEW STANDARD SERIES OF POPULAR FICTION.
Our "Standard Series" includes the best works by the best authors, in cheap, neat, convenient and readable volumes, suitable for the parlor, the rail-car, the waiting room, the sea-side!
"Paper cover, neat, handy, fit size, small. Just the thing to while away a leisure hour."—Boston Transcript.
"We can only read Dr. Oliphant's book without being impressed with the fidelity of the author's conception of the truth of the theory which is the object of illustration, or with the boldness with which he confronts the difficulties which he encounters."—Prof. R. L. Tweedie.
Dr. Tweedie is the author of a work on the intellectual philosophy of the Scotch school, which is placed in a position far higher than we are sure that we can, however profound his knowledge upon the subject of which it treats, will rise from its perusal without a feeling of admiration for its able author, and gratitude and improvement in a high degree while he reveals to readers the secrets of his own mind.
"Dr. Tweedie's book contains a great deal of the most valuable results of the labors of the master minds of the past, stated in a clear, forcible and practical character. The work is to be welcomed as a valuable contribution to the literature of Scotland, and among the most excellent manuals of philosophical science which have appeared in the English language. It is of great value as an exposition of the principles of intellectual philosophy, brilliant in illustration, and bringing the results of a new philosophy within the reach of a person of ordinary intelligence and moderate attainments. It is a book which we can heartily recommend to the students of a new philosophy, and to the general reader, for conception as a masterpiece, motive in its relation to ordinary matter, the constitution of the human mind, the perception as a materialist

A RAILROAD TRAIN ATTACKED BY GUERRILLAS.—Information has reached Cairo that a train of cars, containing some 200 United States troops, while on its way from Warrenton to Alexandria yesterday, was fired into by rebel guerrillas, when within two miles of Manassas Junction, the cars were perforated by a number of balls, but no one was injured. After the valley the train was stopped, and the rebels, forming themselves along the road, fired a volley into the troops into the woods, and then renewed the attack in earnest (no assistants). They failed to discover the enemy, however, and returned to the cars, which were again put in motion—proceeding without further interruption. Washington Star, July 30.

PERSONAL.

INFORMATION WANTED.—PERRY WRIGHT, or PERRY ORR, left home, Canaan Township, Wayne County, Ohio, April 8, last, in 12 years old, 4 feet and 6 or 8 inches high, stout, light hair, blue eyes, brown neck in front of his ears, recently discovered a soft down on his cheeks and forehead. He wished to go into the army or on the lakes, and officers who have seen the scrawny, sunburnt countenance recently having left for the army at large, are particularly requested to send this only son of a heartbroken mother. Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington, D. C., papers and soldiers' friends throughout the country generally, are earnestly requested and entreated to give this notice an insertion, within their columns. The weakened and broken mother offers a reward of $50 dollars for the information of the whereabouts of MARIA WRIGHT, Burbank Postoffice, Wayne County, Ohio, when the above named will be cheerfully granted.

PERSONS WISHING TO SEE THEIR AFFIANCED or best friends, or any one else, can hear from them by addressing "Cupid," Box No. 1,000, Times Office.

...ver be less or more in any class, at the option of the bidder; but all the articles embraced in a class must be bid for.

Each class will be considered by itself, and contract for that class will be awarded to the bidder whose proposals for the articles comprised in the class are lowest in the aggregate.

The cloth for the pea jackets shall be refined pilot cloth; overcoat to be blue, wool-dyed.

The felt caps shall be of felt cloth, dyed pure indigo blue, made of the best material, and conform in the piece, color, grade of wool, and in all other respects, to the samples deposited at the navy yards.

The cloth for blue cloth round jackets and trowsers shall be refined, fat wool, and pure indigo blue, wool-dyed.

The satinet must be 27 inches wide inside of list, with a heading to consist of not less than twelve white woolen threads at each end of the piece; must weigh not less than 9½ ounces per yard, to contain in each piece about 40 yards; the yarn to be carded, spun, woven, scoured, and wool-dyed; and the dining cloth, pure indigo blue, wool-dyed. Each bale of 400 yards shall average nine and a half ounces to the yard, and no piece shall be below 9¼ ounces to the yard, and no piece shall be more than 10 ounces per yard. Trial like the above.

The broadcloth and satinet of which garments are made shall be well sponged before made up.

The flannel must be all wool, wool-dyed navy indigo blue, and twilled; must be in pieces of about 30 yards in length, 31 inches wide, weighing five and one-half ounces per yard, of the fabric described, and to have four white woolen threads, woven in the whole length of the piece, at each edge. The flannel is to be delivered in pieces of ten pieces each, rolled separately without cloth boards; each bale to contain 100 pieces and 1965 pounds gross. No piece to have a less average than 5 6-10 ounces per yard.

The overshirts must be made of flannel like the above.

The woolen knit undershirts must be warp knit, all wool, best American fleece, indigo wool-dyed, made up entirely by hand, of two sizes—No. 1, 36 inches long, 45 inches round, 24 inches long, 30 inches round—to weigh not less than 1134 pounds per dozen, in all respects equal to samples.

The woolen knit drawers are to be all wool, best American fleece, indigo wool-dyed, warp stitch, of two sizes—No. 1, waist to measure round 28 inches, length 44 inches, round the hip 36 inches, length 44 inches, round the hip; waistband to be of strong twisted cotton web well sewed, and firmly attached to the body, to correspond in every respect with the sample.

The Barnsley sheeting must be free from cotton, 80 inches wide, and to contain twelve ounces 31-100 per yard; texture, 4 by 4 to 1-10 inch.

The canvas duck must be free from cotton, 27 inches in width, and about 30 yards in the piece, double thread warp and filling; weight, eight ounces 25-100 per yard; texture, 9 by 10 to 10 inch.

The shoes must be plainly stamped with the contractor's name, the number of the pair, and year when made. The sizes to be in the following proportions for each 100 pairs, unless otherwise ordered, viz.: 6 of No. 0, 17 of No. 1, 26 of No. 2, 25 of No. 3, 16 of No. 4, 7 of No. 5, and 3 of No. 6. They must be sewed with a square awl, and conform in all respects to the standard pairs, and be delivered in good strong boxes, the tops of which are to be securely fastened with screws, and each box to contain 25 pairs. In these proportions, viz.: 9 pairs of No. 0, with 17 of No. 1, 23 of No. 2, with 23 of No. 3, or vice versa, 15 of No. 3 with 17 of No. 4, 10 of No. 4 with 10 of No. 5, the calfskin and Kipskin shoes to be packed in separate boxes.

The Goods must be of the best quality of oak tanned grain leather, sewed with 6 square awl; all the lasting and stitching to be done with the hand, to correspond with the sample in every respect, except that the upper shall be sewed with the hand, and not machine stitch, as on sample.

The woolen socks must be woven or knit, indigo mixed, all wool; shall be well scoured, and in color and quality fully equal to sample.

The mattresses must weigh ten pounds, including ticking, which is to be cut 6 feet 3 inches in length and 31 inches wide. The covers must measure 77 inches in length and 37 inches in width. The hair, ticking and covers must conform to samples.

The blankets must be equal to the best blue American blankets, 32 inches wide, texture 3 threads by 4 threads to the inch of an inch, dyed with pure Bengal indigo.

The blankets must weigh 6¾ pounds per pair, and measure 60 by 72 inches each. Ten pairs must weigh 325 pounds, and no pair shall weigh less than 6½ pounds gross. They are to be made of clean wool, and each blanket must be marked "U. S. Navy," as in the sample.

The black silk handkerchiefs must be 21¾ by 21¾ inches, and weigh one ounce and twelve grains Troy; texture, 14 by 28 to one-eighth of an inch.

Bidders for the above will specify whether the articles they propose to furnish are to be of the growth, production and manufacture of the United States, as a preference will be given to such.

A schedule of the three sizes for each 100 pieces of made-up clothing will be found with the samples at the respective yards; and all the above articles, including the necessary buttons, rings, &c., are to be fully equal in the quality, texture, color, weight, and finish of material and conform in pattern, size and workmanship to the said samples. The space must be uniform at all the stations.

All the above articles must be subject to such inspection at the place of delivery as the chief of this bureau may direct; and no article will be received that is not fully equal to the sample in every respect, and which does not conform to the stipulation and provisions of the contract to be made.

The whole must be delivered at the risk and expense of the contractor. Each box and bale to be marked with the contractor's name. The inspecting officers to be appointed by the Navy Department.

The offers must distinguish the prices for each article mentioned in a class, and must be calculated to cover every expense attending the fulfillment of the contract, including the necessary buttons.

In case of failure on the part of the contractor to deliver the several articles, which may be ordered from them, in proper time and of proper quality, the Chief of the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing shall be authorized to purchase or direct purchase to be made of what may be required to supply the deficiency. The specialties to be expressed in the contract; the record of a requisition, or a duplicate copy thereof, at the Bureau of Provisions and Clothing, or at either of the navy yards offering, shall be evidence that such requisition has been made and received.

Two or more approved sureties in a sum equal to the estimated amount of the respective contracts with the required, and twenty per centum will be withheld from the amount of all payments on account thereof as collateral security, and not to any event to be paid until it is in all respects satisfied that the articles furnished to the amount of all deliveries made will be paid for by the navy agent within ten days after the warrants for the same shall have been passed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Bidders whose proposals shall be accepted (and none other) will be forthwith notified; and as early as practicable a contract will be transmitted to them for execution, which contract must be returned to the bureau within ten days, exclusive of the time required for the regular transmission of the mail.

A record, or duplicate of the letter informing a bidder of the acceptance of his proposal, will be deemed a sufficient notice thereof, within the meaning of the act of 1846, and his bid will be made and accepted in conformity with this understanding.

Every offer made must be accompanied (as directed in the advertisement making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ended 30th of August, 1849) by a written guarantee, signed by one or more responsible persons, to the effect that he or they undertake that the bidder or bidders will, if his or their bid or proposal be accepted, enter into a contract in the form above stated, with sufficient sureties, to furnish the supplies proposed. The Bureau will not be obligated to consider any proposal unless accompanied by the guarantee required by law, and the satisfactory evidence that the bidder has the pecuniary resources to enable him to fulfill his contract. The guarantee to be certified by the Navy Agent, District Attorney, or the Collector of the customs.

Blank forms of proposals may be obtained on application to the Navy Agents at Portsmouth, N. H.; Boston, New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and at this Bureau. The attention of bidders is called to the samples and description of articles required, as, in the inspection before reception, a just, but rigid comparison will be made between the articles offered and the samples and contract, receiving none that fall below them; and their attention is also particularly directed to the joint resolution of 27th March, 1824, in addition to the act of 30th August, 1846.

ARMY SUPPLIES.

OFFICE OF ARMY CLOTHING AND EQUIPAGE, No. 502 Broadway, NEW-YORK, July 21, 1863.

NEW-YORK, July 25, 1863.

PROPOSALS.

Navy Department, July 25, 1863.

Sealed proposals will be received at this office until 12 M. on the 1st day of August next, for furnishing the steam machinery for armored vessel of wood, to be propelled by two screws, acting independently of each other.

There will be one such vessel, two pairs of direct acting engines, and four boilers of iron cylindrical form, with fire-boxes to be vertical and placed in the middle of the vessel. The diameter of each cylinder to be fifty-five inches, and the stroke of its piston three feet.

The boilers to be of the horizontal tubular kind, with separate steam chests; to be capable of a test pressure, and to work steadily at a pressure of 30 pounds per square inch.

The screws to be of manganese bronze, of four feet pitch of diameter, and of 20 feet mean pitch; to have four blades, and to be 20 feet long. They will be sustained from the counter of the vessel by a brass hanger, and their shaft will revolve in a brass pipe connecting the hanger with the hull.

There will be fourteen eight inch hoisting engines, with blowers connected to Dimpfel's fan or to blow in an air-tight fire-room. Each boiler will be required to have an auxiliary steam-pump. The exact number of duplicate pieces, tools, instruments, stores, &c., required in such naval contracts are to be furnished.

The machinery is to be all first-class machinery for steaming the vessel, as coal hunkers, shaft alleys, &c., and is to be in all respects complete for that purpose, according to naval usages.

The designs, quality of material, and workmanship to be first class, according to naval standard. The parties will make their own general and working drawings, submitting the same to the Navy Department for approval before executing them.

Before a contract is made, the parties will be required to furnish a full and detailed specification.

The machinery is to be erected in the vessels at the different Navy-yards of Kittery, Maine; Charlestown, Massachusetts; New-York and Philadelphia. The proposal will state the name or names of the Navy-yards at which the parties intend to furnish the machinery; the gross sum for which they propose to furnish the machinery in the vessel complete, and ready for steaming; and the time from the date of contract at which they will guarantee to complete the work.

Bidders will be required to deposit a Composite for distant Machinery of Vessels with Two Screws, to Accompany Them from other business letters. The contract will contain the usual conditions, and payments will be made in the usual manner as the work progresses.

The Department reserves to itself the right to reject any or all of the proposals that may be made under this advertisement, if, in its opinion, the public interest requires.

MEDICAL.

IMPORTANT—FOR THREE DOLLARS.

Dr. C. BERT & CO. will send their specific for the cure of diseases brought on by secret habits and other improprieties, together with a receipt for its manufacture. Address Dr. C. BERT & CO., New-York.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & MOORE, Lispenard-st., near Broadway, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the only certain and reliable physician for the cure of a private character in the country. Persons in the country must note cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and expense than any one can or will, and those who have been robbed of their money and health, call on me will find best skill and treatment. Those who have applied to me will have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days. Those diet and abstain from Sexual Intercourse. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from Impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few days. Stricture cured and perfectly cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance failing to receive proper treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD, No. 80 Lispenard-st., the only place. Call and write.

SURE CURE—BY DR. POWERS, SECCESSfully consulted with Dr. WARD, No. 80 Lispenard-st. Confidential on the plan of the Hospital des Venériens, Paris; offers the speedy and safe cure of private diseases, however caused. Dr. W. will cure any case of private disease that can be cured. Diseases arising from the use of Mercury, viz.: Syphilis, scrofulous, glect, strictures, ulcers, tumors, cancers, secondary and constitutional syphilis, diseases of the kidneys, &c., &c. Thirty years of extensive practice in the above diseases in all their forms enables Dr. W. to cure the most obstinate cases in a few days. Those complaints unable to be cured by the treatment of others or who have been unsuccessful in their own practice, have failed. Dr. Powers' Essence of Life restores the vigor of youth in from two to three weeks. The most virulent cases of gonorrhœa or gleet, no matter how long standing, are cured in a few days. ADVICE TO LADIES.—IN ALL CASES where infallible medicines are desired, or mode of treatment that never fails, consult Dr. A. MAURICEAU, Professor of Diseases of Women, author of "The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion," who treats female complaints exclusively. Office No. 129 Duane-st.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated and cured fifty thousand cases without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but possesses the peculiarly valuable property of annihilating the rank and poisonous taint which in blood is sure to reach and ruin his remedy is used. That is what he claims for it, and what he other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and others of high standing, in some pitiful case who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it, and yet how they find their new and unqualified proclaimed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is 61 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

CITY INSPECTOR'S DEPARTMENT,
NEW-YORK, July 2, 1863.

TO THE RESIDENTS AND OCCUPANTS OF STORES ON BROADWAY:

The undersigned would respectfully call your attention to the fact that the almost universal custom of sweeping out the stores on this thoroughfare in the morning, is a great nuisance to the perfect cleaning of the street and keeping it free from dust.

In sweeping the stores at this time of day creates a suffocating cloud, the dust is carried along the line of the walks and, mixed by every gust of wind, is an intolerable annoyance to all persons who have occasion to be out, leaving them the appearance of not having been swept by the City sight sweepers. It therefore respectfully request that you cause your stores and sidewalks to be swept at night, and that the sweepings be deposited in the street, so that the sweepers may be enabled to gather them up in their carts, and that the occupants shall have no cause for complaint on account of any unnecessary inconvenience.

Very respectfully your obedient servant,
WM. A. DOOLEY, City Inspector.

THE MISSISSIPPI OPEN.

Arrival at St. Louis of the Imperial from New-Orleans.

REJOICINGS OVER THE EVENT.

Departure of Other Vessels for New-Orleans.

St. Louis, Tuesday, July 28.

The steamer Imperial, the first boat from New-Orleans, arrived here this morning. A large crowd of merchants and other citizens greeted her arrival, and a national salute was fired in honor of the opening of the Mississippi. The steamer Silver Spray sailed this evening for New-Orleans, with a large load of private freight under the permanent list. The Continental left yesterday for the same port, heavily laden with Government stores.

MORGAN'S LAST RAID.

How the Band was Finally Captured.

From the Cleveland Herald, July 27.

We have already mentioned the fight that took place at Springfield, between Steubenville and Salineville, on Saturday evening. That fight was in reality a threatening attack of one portion of our forces upon another portion of the same, in order to secure the surrender of Morgan's command. The militia were posted on a hill overlooking a road which Morgan was expected to traverse, and the cavalry and other regular forces were to occupy positions that would have enabled them to surprise and "bag" the whole rebel command. As the Ninth Michigan cavalry, under Maj. Way, were moving along the road to take up the position assigned to them, they were mistaken by the militia for rebels, and were fired upon. Some of the cavalry returned the fire, and before the error could be rectified, infantry and 5th forces had ceased.

Gen. BROOKS, commanding the department, had gone to Wellsville and established his headquarters in the Cleveland and Pittsburgh depot, where he was assisted by the managing officers of the road, who had placed the transportation and telegraphic resources of the road at his disposal. Finding that there was a probability that Morgan would cross the river in the vicinity of Salineville, Brigadier-General MANSFIELD ordered 9 o'clock Sunday morning with a regiment of six months' Pennsylvania infantry, under command of Col. GALLOWAY. These were disembarked at Salineville and marched to a point about two miles distant, where the rebels were expected to cross. The infantry were posted on some rising ground commanding the road, with orders to prevent Morgan's passage.

All intercourse of the utmost charm existed among the people of Salineville. The houses were closed, doors and windows locked and barred, and women and children stampeding into the country with whatever portable property could be carried along. The men with rifles, weapons and courage turned out to assist the progress of the dreaded rebel; while all the others fled with the women and children.

In a short time the expected rebels made their appearance, and found a line of infantry in the field. On catching sight of the infantry they halted, and turned their steeds over hoods in another direction. Before they could get out of the trap they found themselves in Major WAY, with 250 men of the Ninth Michigan cavalry, dashed among them, and commenced cutting right and left. The rebels made but a brief resistance. A few shots were fired by them, and then the cry for help, to wit, for quarters. The scene that followed was almost indescribable. Men dismounted, threw down their arms and begged for quarter, while others galloped around wildly in search of a place of escape, and were brought to time by a pistol shot or saber stroke.

MORGAN himself was riding in a carriage drawn by two white horses. Maj. WAY saw him, and galloped up, reached for him. MORGAN jumped out at the opposite side of the carriage, leaped over a fence, seized a horse, and galloped off at fast as horseflesh, spurred by frightened heels, could carry him. About a couple of hundred of his men succeeded in breaking away, and following their fugitive leader. In the hedgy lane hastily "evacuated" by MORGAN were found his "rations," consisting of a loaf of bread, and a hard-boiled egg, and a bottle of whiskey.

The number of killed in this fight was much less than at first reported. The number of killed rebels was set down as from twenty to thirty, but this must be overrated, as we cannot learn of more than five or six dead bodies having been found. There was a considerable number of wounded, and about two hundred paroled prisoners taken, principally with arms. A special train was sent to Wellsville in the afternoon, with about two hundred and fifty prisoners, captured in the fight or picked up in the neighborhood afterward.

A few of our cavalry were wounded, two or three seriously. Lieut. CLARK was shot through the breast. His wound is dangerous, and he has telegraphed for his wife to come from Michigan.

MORGAN and the remainder of his scattered forces pressed three citizens of Salineville into their service as guides, and continued their flight on the New-Lisbon road. One of the impressed guides made his escape and rode back, conveying intelligence of the result taken, which it was believed was with the skillful design of reaching the Ohio River higher up. Forces were immediately dispatched from Wellsville to head him off, whilst another force followed closely in the rear, and a strong militia force from New-Lisbon came down to meet him.

About 7 o'clock in the afternoon these various detachments closed in around MORGAN in the vicinity of West Point, about midway between New-Lisbon and Wellsville. The rebels were driven to a bluff, from which there was no escape, except by fighting their way through, or leaping from a lofty and almost perpendicular precipice. Finding themselves thus cooped, MORGAN concluded that "discretion was the better part of valor," and "came down" as gracefully as the coconut in Harry Gresham's ditty. With the remainder of this gang, numbered at 364, Col. SHACKELFORD, who was well acquainted with the redoubtable "JOHN," and is said to be a distant relative.

The prisoners were brought back to Wellsville, where their arrival caused great excitement. MORGAN retained his side arms, and moved about freely, although always accompanied by Col. SHACKELFORD. Last night (Sunday) MORGAN and his Staff slept at the Whittaker House, in Wellsville, and at 9 o'clock this morning they, accompanied by Col. SHACKELFORD and his Staff, left on the regular train for Columbus. Lieut. CLARK went on a special train with Col. GALLOWAY, Columbus with the remainder of the prisoners and their guards.

The militia are constantly bringing into the line of road stray prisoners, picked up in the country. The hills are swarming with armed men hunting for fugitive rebels. Nine of MORGAN's party were brought to Bayard Station this morning, who were captured in the neighborhood by the Provost-Marshal's force. They were taken to Alliance, to be sent from that place to Columbus.

MORGAN's men were poorly dressed, ragged, dirty, and very badly used up. Some of them were remnants of gray, and most of them were attired in spoils gathered during their raid. They were very much discouraged at the result of their raid, and the prospect of affairs generally.

MORGAN himself appeared in good spirits, and quite unconcerned at his ill-luck. He is a well-built man of frank complexion, and sandy hair and beard. He last night enjoyed for the first time in a long while the comforts of a second sleep in a good bed, which was some compensation for his otherwise bad luck.

Five companies of Pennsylvania cavalry had been loaded up on the cars of the Cleveland and Pittsburgh road at Pittsburgh on Sunday afternoon, to take part in the chase, but the news of the capture of the entire rebel force rendered their departure unnecessary.

DISGORGING THE PLUNDER.

From the Indianapolis Journal, July 27.

The prisoners of MORGAN's force in Camp Morton have been compelled to disgorge the money they stole during their raid, and we presume it will be handed over to Gen. SHERMAN to distribute among the citizens of Ohio and the State who have been plundered. We did not learn what amount had been obtained, but as nearly every man had a pretty considerable pile, it will probably go a good way toward repairing the robberies. In some cases, however, we heard the prisoners, after they learned that they were to be made to surrender their plunder, gave their money, or a portion of it, to the soldiers on guard, preferring that they should have it to letting it get into the hands of the authorities. One man, we are told, had $1,100 concealed in his canteen, and another had a $20 "greenback" hid in the bowl of his pipe. No doubt a good many have managed to save something, but it will be got at some time or other.

A case of heartlessness that would be amusing if a worthless disgusting, is related of one of the prisoners whose father went out to the camp to see him with a pass from Gen. BURNSIDE. (We may remark, by the way, that no one is allowed in the camp on any pretext, and it will be of no use for anybody, without Gen. BURNSIDE's pass to apply.) The father, as soon as he saw his son, grasped him in his arms, and with unmistakable emotion, begged him to take the oath of allegiance and get his release. The boy replied, he would, he'd be d—d if he would. The old man, with many entreaties, and all the earnestness of a father begging for a son's salvation, continued to urge him, but it was no use; by a resolute and even unfeeling refusal, at last the father's grief overcame him and he fainted. The son turned away, and remarked as he stepped off, "Never mind, he'll soon get over it."

Among the prisoners was one Scotchman who had a pass from Gen. MILROY in his pocket, which was still undischarged. When the paper was first found, and before it was opened, he said, with considerable confidence, that it would be returned to him as only a relic of hard which he held again. "I'm a friend, and he didn't

From the Cleveland Herald, July 27.

We have already mentioned the fight that took place at Springfield, between Steubenville and Salineville, on Saturday evening. That fight was in reality a threatening attack of one portion of our forces upon another portion of the same, in order to secure the surrender of Morgan's command. The militia were posted on a hill overlooking a road which Morgan was expected to traverse, and the cavalry and other regular forces were to occupy positions that would have enabled them to surprise and "bag" the whole rebel command. As the Ninth Michigan cavalry, under Maj. WAY, were moving along the road to take up the position assigned to them, they were mistaken by the militia for rebels, and were fired upon. Some of the cavalry returned the fire, and before the error could be rectified, infantry and 5th forces had ceased.

Gen. BROOKS, commanding the department, had gone to Wellsville and established his headquarters in the Cleveland and Pittsburgh depot, where he was assisted by the managing officers of the road, who had placed the transportation and telegraphic resources of the road at his disposal. Finding that there was a probability that Morgan would cross the river in the vicinity of Salineville, Brigadier-General MANSFIELD ordered 9 o'clock Sunday morning with a regiment of six months' Pennsylvania infantry, under command of Col. GALLOWAY. These were disembarked at Salineville and marched to a point about two miles distant, where the rebels were expected to cross. The infantry were posted on some rising ground commanding the road, with orders to prevent Morgan's passage.

All intercourse of the utmost charm existed among the people of Salineville. The houses were closed, doors and windows locked and barred, and women and children stampeding into the country with whatever portable property could be carried along. The men with rifles, weapons and courage turned out to assist the progress of the dreaded rebel; while all the others fled with the women and children.

In a short time the expected rebels made their appearance, and found a line of infantry in the field. On catching sight of the infantry they halted, and turned their steeds over hoods in another direction. Before they could get out of the trap they found themselves in Major WAY, with 250 men of the Ninth Michigan cavalry, dashed among them, and commenced cutting right and left. The rebels made but a brief resistance. A few shots were fired by them, and then the cry for help, to wit, for quarters. The scene that followed was almost indescribable. Men dismounted, threw down their arms and begged for quarter, while others galloped around wildly in search of a place of escape, and were brought to time by a pistol shot or saber stroke.

MORGAN himself was riding in a carriage drawn by two white horses. Maj. WAY saw him, and galloped up, reached for him. MORGAN jumped out at the opposite side of the carriage, leaped over a fence, seized a horse, and galloped off at fast as horseflesh, spurred by frightened heels, could carry him. About a couple of hundred of his men succeeded in breaking away, and following their fugitive leader. In the hedgy lane hastily "evacuated" by MORGAN were found his "rations," consisting of a loaf of bread, and a hard-boiled egg, and a bottle of whiskey.

The number of killed in this fight was much less than at first reported. The number of killed rebels was set down as from twenty to thirty, but this must be overrated, as we cannot learn of more than five or six dead bodies having been found. There was a considerable number of wounded, and about two hundred paroled prisoners taken, principally with arms. A special train was sent to Wellsville in the afternoon, with about two hundred and fifty prisoners, captured in the fight or picked up in the neighborhood afterward.

A few of our cavalry were wounded, two or three seriously. Lieut. CLARK was shot through the breast. His wound is dangerous, and he has telegraphed for his wife to come from Michigan.

MORGAN and the remainder of his scattered forces pressed three citizens of Salineville into their service as guides, and continued their flight on the New-Lisbon road. One of the impressed guides made his escape and rode back, conveying intelligence of the result taken, which it was believed was with the skillful design of reaching the Ohio River higher up. Forces were immediately dispatched from Wellsville to head him off, whilst another force followed closely in the rear, and a strong militia force from New-Lisbon came down to meet him.

About 7 o'clock in the afternoon these various detachments closed in around MORGAN in the vicinity of West Point, about midway between New-Lisbon and Wellsville. The rebels were driven to a bluff, from which there was no escape, except by fighting their way through, or leaping from a lofty and almost perpendicular precipice. Finding themselves thus cooped, MORGAN concluded that "discretion was the better part of valor," and "came down" as gracefully as the coconut in Harry Gresham's ditty. With the remainder of his gang, numbered at 364, Col. SHACKELFORD, who was well acquainted with the redoubtable "JOHN," and is said to be a distant relative.

The prisoners were brought back to Wellsville, where their arrival caused great excitement. MORGAN retained his side arms, and moved about freely, although always accompanied by Col. SHACKELFORD. Last night (Sunday) MORGAN and his Staff slept at the Whittaker House, in Wellsville, and at 9 o'clock this morning they, accompanied by Col. SHACKELFORD and his Staff, left on the regular train for Columbus. Lieut. CLARK went on a special train with Col. GALLOWAY, Columbus with the remainder of the prisoners and their guards.

The militia are constantly bringing into the line of road stray prisoners, picked up in the country. The hills are swarming with armed men hunting for fugitive rebels. Nine of MORGAN's party were brought to Bayard Station this morning, who were captured in the neighborhood by the Provost-Marshal's force. They were taken to Alliance, to be sent from that place to Columbus.

MORGAN's men were poorly dressed, ragged, dirty, and very badly used up. Some of them were remnants of gray, and most of them were attired in spoils gathered during their raid. They were very much discouraged at the result of their raid, and the prospect of affairs generally.

MORGAN himself appeared in good spirits, and quite unconcerned at his ill-luck. He is a well-built man of frank complexion, and sandy hair and beard. He last night enjoyed for the first time in a long while the comforts of a second sleep in a good bed, which was some compensation for his otherwise bad luck.

Five companies of Pennsylvania cavalry had been loaded up on the cars of the Cleveland and Pittsburgh road at Pittsburgh on Sunday afternoon, to take part in the chase, but the news of the capture of the entire rebel force rendered their departure unnecessary.

DISGORGING THE PLUNDER.

From the Indianapolis Journal, July 27.

The prisoners of MORGAN's force in Camp Morton have been compelled to disgorge the money they stole during their raid, and we presume it will be handed over to Gen. SHERMAN to distribute among the citizens of Ohio and the State who have been plundered. We did not learn what amount had been obtained, but as nearly every man had a pretty considerable pile, it will probably go a good way toward repairing the robberies. In some cases, however, we heard the prisoners, after they learned that they were to be made to surrender their plunder, gave their money, or a portion of it, to the soldiers on guard, preferring that they should have it to letting it get into the hands of the authorities. One man, we are told, had $1,100 concealed in his canteen, and another had a $20 "greenback" hid in the bowl of his pipe. No doubt a good many have managed to save something, but it will be got at some time or other.

A case of heartlessness that would be amusing if a worthless disgusting, is related of one of the prisoners whose father went out to the camp to see him with a pass from Gen. BURNSIDE. (We may remark, by the way, that no one is allowed in the camp on any pretext, and it will be of no use for anybody, without Gen. BURNSIDE's pass to apply.) The father, as soon as he saw his son, grasped him in his arms, and with unmistakable emotion, begged him to take the oath of allegiance and get his release. The boy replied, he would, he'd be d—d if he would. The old man, with many entreaties, and all the earnestness of a father begging for a son's salvation, continued to urge him, but it was no use; by a resolute and even unfeeling refusal, at last the father's grief overcame him and he fainted. NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

Arrival of Rebel Prisoners—Extracts from the Richmond Papers—Gold Worth $11—Preparations for Defense in Savannah, &c., &c.

FORTRESS MONROE, Tuesday, July 28.

Flag-of-truce steamer New-York arrived from City Point last evening, in charge of Capt. MARSHAL, She brings no prisoners. She brings Richmond papers to the 27th.

The propeller United States arrived here this afternoon with 134 rebel prisoners, which were sent to Fort Norfolk.

The following are extracts from the Richmond papers:

"The Fayetteville (N. C.) Observer insists that Dr. MORSE, President of the Telegraph Company, should dismiss the enlarging reporter who invented the story of Gen. LEE taking 40,000 prisoners. Does the Observer wish to starve out the telegraph by confining it to the truth?"

"Dr. JOHN H. DAVIS died in Richmond last Friday."

"Gold is worth $11 in Richmond."

"Seventy-seven Yankee prisoners arrived yesterday morning from Culloway, and 20 from Wytheville."

"The Mayor of Savannah has issued a proclamation requesting all residents of the city to organize for home defence and all managers of stores, workshops and other places of business to close their at 2 o'clock on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, for the purpose of drill. He directs that an enrollment be made of every man in the city, capable of bearing arms in its defence."

"Hon. A. H. STEPHENS reached Augusta, Ga., yesterday, from Richmond."

The Portsmouth Virginian of the 27th says:

"The trial of Dr. WRIGHT is progressing, and the following witnesses have been examined: Lieut.-Col. CHAS. FAIR, One Hundred and Fifty-fifth New-York; Lieut. CHARLES PARKER, One Hundred and Fifty-fifth New-York, and Lieut.-Col. GEORGE M. GUESS, One Hundred and Forty-eighth New-York."

THOSE INTERCEPTED DISPATCHES.

Interesting Letters from Gen. Cooper and Jeff. Davis to Gen. Lee.

About the time of the battles at Gettysburgh much was said of dispatches from Gen. COOPER and Jeff. DAVIS to Gen. LEE which had been intercepted by our scouts. The following are the documents in question:

RESACA GEETTYSBURGH, PENN., July 5, 1863.

Maj.-Gen. R. E. Lee, Commanding Army in the field:

The following dispatch was intercepted by our scouts.

DANIEL BUTTERFIELD,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

LETTER FROM THE REBEL ADJUTANT-GENERAL.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE, RICHMOND, June 22, 1863.

GENERAL: While with the President last evening, I received your letter of the 23d inst. After reading it to the President, he was embarrassed to understand that part of it which refers to the plan of assembling an army at Culpepper Court-house, under Gen. BEAUREGARD. This is the first intimation that he has had that such a plan was ever in contemplation, and not being willing to enter into consultation on the subject now he can only say positively he cannot lend his consent to any such movement.

You will doubtless learn before this reaches you that the enemy has again assembled in force on the Peninsula, estimated between 20,000 and 30,000 men, from 5,000 to 10,000 of whom are reported to be in the vicinity of White House, and the remainder at Yorktown. It is impossible to say whether the enlisted men will re-enlist as the time of their service expires, and have not requested me to obtain their views; but the estimate, making due allowance for errors, is quite near enough to satisfy the most incredulous that he is this vicinity is sufficient force in cavalry, artillery and infantry to do much harm, whether his purpose be to make a demonstration on Richmond, or to confine himself to raids in breaking your communications and devastating the country. His efforts in the last case may prove more successful than the first, if we may judge by what took place at Hanover only two days ago when about 1,000 or 1,200 of his cavalry suddenly appeared there, and did some execution in breaking the railroad, and burning a bridge, some buildings, public stores, &c. It is important that this raid took place only about two days after Gen. COSAN's brigade had left there for Gordonsville. Had it remained at Hanover Junction, it is reasonable to suppose that most of the enemy's cavalry would have been either destroyed or captured, and the property saved from injury. Every effort is being made here to be prepared for the enemy at all points, but we must look chiefly to the protection of the Capital. In doing this, we may be obliged to hazard some other points. You can easily estimate our strength, and I suggest for your consideration whether, in this state of things, you might not be able to spare a portion of your force to protect your line of communication against attempted raids by the enemy.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. COOPER, Adjutant-General.

Gen. R. E. LEE, Commanding Army Northern Virginia, Winchester, Va.

LETTER FROM JEFF. DAVIS.

RICHMOND, June 25, 1863.

GENERAL: Yours of the 23d received this evening, and I hasten to reply to the point presented in relation to the forces on the coasts of South Carolina and Georgia. The hopes indulged as to our operations at the time which would intervene between the discharge of the enemy's trained troops, and the substitution for them by others, have been disappointed by the very error against which it was sought by warning to guard. GRANT reached the river, got reinforcements, made intrenchments, and Gen. JOHNSTON confines to call for reinforcements, though his first requisition was more than filled by WHEELER'S troops from Gens. BEAUREGARD and BRAGG. Gen. BRAGG is threatened with attack, has fallen back to his intrenched position at Tullahoma, and called on BUCKNER for aid.

Gen. BEAUREGARD says that no troops have been withdrawn by the enemy from his front since those returned to Newbern, and that his whole force is necessary to cover his line. This being in answer to a proposition to withdraw a portion of the enemy, gives to the words, "with all his disposable force," pointing him at the same time to the vital importance of holding the Mississippi, and communicating the fear that Vicksburgh would fall unless JOHNSTON was strongly and promptly reinforced. D. H. HILL has a small force, part of which has been brought here. CLINGMAN's brigade is near Wilmington, COLQUITT's at Kingston, MAHON's, nominal, on the railroad at Weldon, and C. COSH's, RANSOM's and JENKINS' have been brought here; the two last temporarily from the defence of Petersburgh and the country thereabouts.

WISE's brigade is, as you left it, engaged in the defence of Richmond and serving in the country to the east of the city. The enemy have been repulsed in large force at the White House, with indications of an advance on Richmond. We are organizing some militia home guards, and the spirit of resistance is increasing. COSAN's brigade, in accordance with your orders, has been left at Hanover Junction. All the artillery, I am informed, was taken away, and the single regiment of infantry, which constituted the guard for the bridges, proved unequal to the duty, as you have no doubt learned. Reinforcements were ordered to go up, but some delay occurred, and they arrived too late to save the bridge or the brave guard which had unsuccessfully defended it. The YANKEES, reported to be three thousand of cavalry, returned from this Central Road in the direction of Hanover, (old town,) and nothing has been heard of them since.

It was stated that Gen. R. F. LEE was captured at the house of Mr. WICKHAM, but I trust it will prove to be one of the many startling rumors which the newspapers delight to circulate. The advance of your army into Pennsylvania, and the withdrawal of cavalry, returned from the Central Road in the direction of Hanover, (old town,) and nothing has been heard of them since.

It was stated that Gen. R. F. LEE was captured at the house of Mr. WICKHAM, but I trust it will prove to be one of the many startling rumors which the newspapers delight to circulate. The advance of your army into Pennsylvania, and the withdrawal of cavalry, required Mr. WADE for cavalry on the north and east of the city, but except one regiment from North Carolina, I do not know of any which we can expect soon to be available to us. In yours of the 20th you say: "If any of the brigades that I have left behind for the protection of Richmond, can, in your opinion, be spared, I should like them to be sent me." It has been an effort with me to answer the clamor to have troops stopped or recalled to protect the city and the railroad communicating with your army. COSAN's brigade has gone, and WISE's is the only other left by you. COSAN was in North Carolina, and DAVIS' brigade was sent to complete Hoke's division in place of COSAN's, and RANSOM's and JENKINS' constitute the reinforcement in that side, as soon as WELDON, and are relied on for service elsewhere from Wilmington to Richmond.

Gen. LEE is positive that the enemy intend to at-
